Mickey Cohen Linked to Florida Bookie

Crime Group Finds Checks Pointing to Rich Payoff

California Gambler Received Amounts Up to $10,000, Senators Learn

Probe Progresses

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senate crime investigators have found a batch of cancelled checks made out to Mickey Cohen, the Los Angeles mobster, by a Florida bookie, it was learned last night.

Some checks were for as much as $10,000 and none was for less than $3500. One source estimated the checks averaged $5000 every third day or about $50,000 a month for a considerable period. Another source, however, said the total was closer to $75,000 for the unspecified period covered.

The checks were made out by one John O'Rourke, a West Palm Beach, Fla., bookie, according to Senate Crime Committee sources. It was stated that O'Rourke's "eyes popped" when he was confronted with the checks during the recent Florida trip of Senate investigators.

He Always Won

O'Rourke told the Senators and their staff that the money represented Cohen's winnings for bets on horse races in Florida. But, under questioning, the Florida bookie said Cohen always won while he himself never seemed to pick a winner.

The Senators are known to have cast a jaundiced eye on this testimony. But they were uncertain whether the money represented a payoff for an interest in some Florida gambling venture or something else. One source speculated that the money was paid Cohen to keep him from muscling in on a particularly lucrative Florida business.

Cohen, who has been called "Los Angeles Public Enemy No. 1" by that city's mayor, has been the target of six assassination attempts in the past four years. The last time, only this February, he escaped when someone put a dynamite bomb under a dressing room window in his $100,000, radar protected California home. He escaped because he was nosing about the house looking for the intruder who had tripped a burglar alarm.

Cohen has been charged by California's Attorney General Fred N. Howser with having an annual take from horserace bookmaking

U. S. Pilot Freed By Chinese Reds

Hongkong (Thursday) June 1 (AP).—American pilot James McGovern, held in Communist China for almost five months, was returned to Hongkong yesterday.

The flier from Elizabeth, N. J., was brought to the border of this British colony yesterday by armed Chinese Red guards.

McGovern's transport plane crash landed on a flight from Hongkong to Kunming, China. He was a pilot for Civil Air Transport, an airline run in National China by retired United States Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault.

8 Men Moved

Half Police Vice Squad Transferred

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Fifty percent of the Vice Squad was transferred yesterday in one of the biggest shakeups in the history of that unit of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Eight officers, headed by Detective Sergt. Nunzio Bonaccorsy, were detailed to the vice squad replacing eight headed by acting Lieut. Richard McCarty.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett said the mass transfer, effective at 8 a. m. today, had no special significance.

"It has always been my policy not to keep any man on the vice squad too long," Barrett said. "That's the reason, and that's all."

Precinct Detective Arthur H. Molle, Precinct Detective Paul H. Hutsler from No. 2 Precinct, and Pvt. John E. Taymen, formerly Barrett's chauffeur and now assigned to the Central Communications and Records Bureau, William C. Clark, jr., from No. 1, Joseph A Preli, from No. 7, Emmet A. Sullivan, from No. 3, and Leroy Esputt, from No. 13.

Bonaccorsy and Molle were partners on the robbery squad.

GWU Buys Carnegie Law Library

Peace Endowment Purchase Revealed At Commencement

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

George Washington University has acquired the 70,000-volume library of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, announced last night.

Dr. Marvin revealed the purchase of the library, valued at $250,000, at the university's commencement exercises in Constitution Hall, where degrees were conferred on 1451 students.

In an address to the graduates the GWU president also announced the gift of funds for a new engineering and technological building, to cost $500,000. The donors are Charles H. Tompkins, Washington builder, and his wife.

The library and the new engineering building were listed by Dr. Marvin as part of a program of university expansion amounting to more than three million dollars.

The program includes a previously announced $400,000 classroom building, purchase of land for a parking lot at a cost of $530,000, and the $650,000 Warwick Memorial Building for the study of cancer, given by the Washington Home for Foundlings.

The university acquired the Carnegie Library, considered one of the best in the country on international law and relations, after negotiations between Dr. Marvin and Dr. James T. Shotwell, president of the Carnegie Endowment.

The library now is housed in the endowment's headquarters at 700 Jackson pl. nw. It had been expected that the books would be transferred to New York City when the endowment moves into new quarters adjacent to the United Nations Building.

Dr. Shotwell said that in making the decision to leave the library

Fairfax Votes School, Court Bond Issues

County Registers 2-1 Tally for Emergency School Construction; Other Margin Close

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Fairfax County voters yesterday gave overwhelming approval to a $10,500,000 school bond issue and voted, by a much slimmer margin, a $980,000 expenditure for improving the county courthouse.

Complete but unofficial returns from all of the county's 28 precincts showed these results:

For courthouse expansion, 2619; against, 2495.

Although the earliest returns pointed to the success of the school bond issue, it was not until the last precinct reported that the fate of the courthouse proposal was established. Opponents of the expenditure had compiled a two-vote margin with 27 precincts reporting, but final returns from Falls Church Precinct No. 1 gave the bond issue proponents 265 votes to 139 for the opposition.

D. C. Heads Want A New Title For Health Officer

Commission Urged to Act

Partisans of Freedom Fair Come Out for 'Massman Plan'

Never-say-die partisans of Freedom Fair last night urged the Sesquicentennial Commission to proceed with the "Massman Plan," in a rousing session replete with bouncy cheerleaders, held at the Hamilton Hotel.

Representing 33 organizations of all types, the Greater Washington Business and Citizens Committee for Freedom Fair also voted to let its executive committee seek admission to a meeting of the full Sesquicentennial Commission at 3 p.m. today in the Senate District Committee room.

In a scheduled closed door meeting, the commission is expected to dispose of its boiling hot potato—a recommendation by the Sesqui executive committee to drop the Freedom Fair.

Attorney General McGrath has ruled that the commission can't legally set up a nonprofit corporation to run the fair.

In his "plan," Paul Massman, Sesqui general manager, has suggested this program for the fair "if Washington wants one": 1. Acquisition of a 200-acre site. 2. Rental of land to industry for construction of its own buildings. 3. Assignment of Government officials to cut red tape. 4. A survey to find out how much industry is willing to pay.

Jerome B. McKee, president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, who proposed backing Massman's plan, said the citizens committee has alternative plans if the commission doesn't cotton to the Massman idea, but, he said, "why give it to them to jump at?"

In this second rally arranged by McKee's group, the citizens' committee also asked the commission to retract allegations that citizens are apathetic to the fair, take the people into its confidence on fair matters, and proceed with the industry survey.

To cover expenses of the committee, the hat was passed and

Truman Asks For Welfare Department

'Health, Education And Security' Plan Sent to Congress

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday sent back to Congress two previously rejected Government reorganization plans after toning down both to meet "major objections" in the Senate.

1. He renewed his request for a Department of Welfare, but named it instead a "Department of Health, Education and Security" and modified provisions that led to defeat of his first try.

2. He resubmitted his more recently rejected Treasury reorganization plan but exempted the functions of the Comptroller of the Currency from Treasury reshuffling.

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), chairman of the Senate Expenditures Committee, who led Senate opposition to the earlier proposals, conceded both a "better chance" than the original Truman proposals.

Treasury Plan Given Good Chance

McClellan said he doubted there is enough opposition to the new Treasury streamlining plan to stop it. He termed the second proposal for creation of a new department with Cabinet status "a decided improvement" over the old one, but declined to predict what Congress would do with it.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who also fought the two original proposals, declined comment on the revised versions "until I talk with other Republicans."

It was learned that Taft and McClellan were consulted by the

Two Juvenile Court Aides Quit in Row

Judge Cockrill Confirms Departure Of Social Workers

Miss Virginia Clary, chief supervisor of social work for the District's Juvenile Court, and her assistant, Miss Claire Fagrie, have resigned from the court, effective June 30.

This was confirmed last night by Judge Edith H. Cockrill when she was asked about the resignations by a reporter for The Washington Post.

The resignations of the two top officers of the court's social worker staff apparently have resulted from a difference of opinion between the judge and the social workers over the handling of the court's young charges.

No Reasons Given

Judge Cockrill, 36-year-old former Government attorney, said neither Miss Clary nor Miss Fagrie have given their reasons for resigning.

But the judge told a reporter she "thought" the explanation was "the interest of more effective administration."

Concerning the reported differences of opinion between the judge and her staff, Judge Cockrill said she would not comment, because the situation is not "factual."

Miss Clary could not be reached last night. Miss Fagrie referred a reporter to the judge.

Different Philosophies

The difficulty appears to stem from different philosophies towards the court's problem of handling offenders.

U. S. Denies Reports of 5 'Secrets'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The chief of the Justice Department Criminal Division yesterday explicity denied sensational stories listing certain specific "highly secret wartime information" allegedly contained in documents seized in the 1945 Amerasia magazine case.

The stories, published yesterday by the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate and the Scripps-Howard newspapers, listed five documents—on their face obviously very secret and containing crucial information — as among those seized when FBI and Office of Strategic Service investigators raided the magazine's offices.

No documents "remotely resembling" those reported were seized, James M. McInerney told reporters yesterday. McInerney, now head of the Criminal Division, was the acting head at the time of the Amerasia case.

Annapolis Head Sure Middies Can Resist Temptation

Annapolis, Md., May 31 A.—The worried parent of a California midshipman stood up at an open forum for 500 parents attending June Week exercises.

"I have formed an almost sacred regard for the Naval Academy," he said.

"But I am alarmed at the vice that prevails outside the walls—the slot machines, the open bars and the close proximity of race tracks. These must be a temptation to the midshipmen."

Vice Admiral Harry W. Hill, Academy superintendent, replied:

"Careful screening of applicants for the Naval Academy, and their way of life here, leave no doubt that any temptations authorized by State law could not influence a midshipman."

Slot machines are legal in Annapolis; it is against the law to sell a midshipman a drink.

'Useful Precedent' Seen When Acheson Submits to Queries

Senators and Representatives of both parties popped questions at Secretary Acheson yesterday after hearing a cheerful report from him on the recent Foreign Ministers' meeting in London.

Such questioning of a Cabinet officer was without precedent except at congressional committee hearings. It took place at what House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) called "an informal joint session" of the two houses at the Library of Congress.

About 250 members, including some of Acheson's bitterest opponents, were on hand to hear him and to cross-examine him.

The questions were not always good and not often relevant to the subject matter of the Secretary's report. Acheson himself seemed tense and strained as he confronted the rows of congressional faces, rising tier on tier before him in the steeply banked Library auditorium.

Useful Precedent Seen

Movie cameras kept up an intermittent clatter during the questioning, and hot lights over the stage brought out sweat on the Secretary's brow. As an experiment in legislative-executive relationships it could not have been called an unqualified success.

Still, for all its drawbacks many leading legislators thought the questioning had set a useful precedent which ought to be repeated.

Representative Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), the majority whip, said the meeting was "extremely helpful." Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) thought it was "a first step toward bringing Congress and the Executive closer together."

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), a veteran member of the Foreign Relations Committee, felt the meeting was a good idea and should be repeated. Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.), of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, complained that more questions had

Allies' Armed Forces Must Be Balanced, Acheson Says

Secretary Urges Congress' Support For Idea; Reports On London Parleys

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson appealed to Congress yesterday to support the fitting together of American armed forces with those of Canada and western Europe.

He said the idea was "revolutionary," but it was the only way to develop enough strength in the North Atlantic community to stop an aggressor.

How much this would cost the United States, what changes it would require in the American defense establishment, he did not say.

But, in an address to about 250 members of both Houses at the Library of Congress, he did say that the non-Soviet nations would have to make "a very large economic and financial effort" to strengthen their common defenses and preserve peace.

Greater Civilian Production

He also said the North Atlantic nations would have to push their civilian production in order to "underpin" defense and to keep and extend their social and political gains.

The Secretary discussed the principle of what he called "balanced collective forces" as part of a report to Congress on the recent foreign ministers' meetings in London. He said the ministers at London had decided on this principle in place of "the duplication by each nation in a large or small way of what every other nation was doing."

"This principle," he said, "will give tangible proof to an aggressor that he must face the combined resources of the community, that there will not be opportunities to pick off one member at a time.

"The United States, as the most populous member of the North Atlantic community and the one with the largest and most productive plant, has necessarily a leading role in building balanced collective forces.

Other Lands Will Respond

"If we faithfully observe this principle and direct our energies to the creation of such forces, we will find a corresponding response from the other treaty members.

"The President has authorized me to say that he supports Secretary Johnson and me in our view that we must make this principle work, for we can see no other way to accomplish the job of de-

Germany Ready To Be Reopened For Investments

Bonn, Germany, May 31 (AP).—The Allied High Commission said tonight it has agreed in principle on plans for reopening Western Germany to foreign investments.

The action does not mean that foreigners can begin investing at once. The commission called its plan one of "progressive relaxation of restrictions."

Details will not be announced until further talks with West German officials.

An Allied source disclosed the first step will be a partial freeing of the blocked accounts of German marks owned by foreign companies.

Then details must be worked out for settling prewar German debts to foreign creditors—which total around one billion dollars—before new investments from abroad actually can begin.

Reverses Alexandria Decision

Arlington Guilty of Racial Bias In High Schools, Court Holds

Racial discrimination is practiced against students of Arlington County's Negro high school, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in Richmond yesterday.

The action reversed a decision by Judge Albert V. Bryan of United States District Court in Alexandria.

In a decision written by Circuit Judge Morris A. Soper, the appeal of two Negro pupils at Hoffman-Boston High School was upheld and their case remanded to the lower court for further proceedings.

Judge Bryan had found that the differences between facilities and courses at Hoffman-Boston for Negroes and Washington-Lee High School for whites balanced out to afford substantially equal treatment for all pupils.

Judge Soper called this position "untenable," since "the evidence indicates that in plant facilities and courses of education the white students of Washington-Lee enjoy advantages which are not afforded to the students at the colored high school."

He said the differences between the schools "constitute unlawful discriminations against pupils of the colored race."

The appellate court denied that the differences are "merely unimportant variations incident to the maintenance of separate establishments."

Judge Bryan had ruled that under the Fourteenth Amendment "equal means equivalent" and that "it is obvious that identical treatment would not carry to every citizen equal protection or equal benefiits under law . . ."

Judge Soper took note of Virginia law, which requires segregation of the races in public schools. But he declared:

"The burdens inherent in segregation must be met by the State which maintains the practice."

He also noted at the outset that the two schools are situated in a county where "the Negroes of school age constitute only a small percentage of the school population, so that the expense involved in affording to the small minority in a separate school every course of study and every kind of equipment and recreational facility that are given the majority is proportionately very great."

The cost is not a factor, Soper's decision stated, in determining whether discrimination exists.

"A sufficient showing has been made by Peggy Council and Julius Brevard (two of the plaintiffs representing 300 Negro pupils) to jus-

UMW-Controlled Bank Plans To Double Capital, Split Stock

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

National Bank of Washington plans a 10-for-1 stock splitup and a 100 percent increase in capital, President Barnum L. Colton revealed last night.

Colton

The proposed doubling of capital, Colton said, is due to the substantial growth of the institution in the past 16 months. Deposits as of April 24 this year totaled $83,676,875, as compared with $22,610,346 on January 1, 1949.

The institution's greatest expansion has taken place since stock control changed hands in April, 1949. Although official confirmation is unavailable, the new owner of controlling interest has definitely been ascertained as John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

Directors of the bank have recommended the recapitalization plan to stockholders who will vote at a special meeting on June 12.

Present par value of capital stock will be changed from $100 a share to $10 a share and 10 shares will be issued for each share outstanding.

After this has been done, the outstanding stock will be increased 100 per cent by giving each shareholder the right to subscribe on a share-for-share basis at $20 a share for the additional 105,000 shares. The bank will then have outstanding 210,000 shares with a par value of $10 a share.

Upon completion of the financing plan, the capital structure of the bank will be as follows: capital, $2,100,000 (double the present $1,050,000), and surplus, $2,100,000.

Crommelin Quits Navy; Will Seek Hill Senate Seat

Pensacola, Fla., May 31 (AP).—Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin, caustic critic of Pentagon policies, retired to private life at his own request today.

Papers terminating his Navy career were signed at the Pensacola Naval Air Station by Capt. R. K. Gaines, commanding officer.

Crommelin was furloughed by the Navy on half pay last April 1, and since then has been filling numerous speaking engagements in his home State of Alabama.

His retirement, effective tomorrow, releases Crommelin to participate in active politics if he chooses. He announced recently he plans to oppose Senator Hill (D., Ala.) in the November general election as an independent.

700,000 Auto Output In May Sets Record

Detroit, May 31 (AP).—The auto industry completed today the biggest production month in its history—with sales still booming.

Unofficial estimates put the May car and truck output at slightly more than 700,000 units. The previous high mark was 663,000 set last August.

Industry sources generally expect three-quarters of a million cars and trucks to roll from the assembly lines in June. If the June program is realized the industry will come to the mid-year point with a total output of more than 3,600,000 vehicles.

Most industry executives also believe they will reach the halfway mark in 1950 with no indication of a tapering-off in the heaviest new-car demand since motor vehicles entered the mass-production era. The car makers' appraisal of the market is substantially more positive than it was in the early weeks of the year.

Layoffs Decline In Manufacturing

Fewer layoffs in manufacturing plants were reported during April than in any month since October, 1948.

The rate of dismissals fell to 13 per 1000 in April, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said yesterday. A year earlier the rate was 28 for every 1000 workers.

Only in the textiles and apparel industries, in which business is declining seasonally, were there significant increases in the layoff rate.

in Washington, the endowment had been "guided by a conviction that the service rendered by the library to officials and scholars of many nations in the past should remain uninterrupted during the important years ahead."

Dr. Marvin said the library will remain in the Carnegie building for the present, but that as soon as possible it will be moved into the university's four-story Social Science Hall.

In addition to the collection of books on international law, the library contains League of Nations and United Nations documents, copies of treaties and a comprehensive card index.

Dr. Marvin did not reveal the purchase price of the library but it was reported that the university acquired it at a fraction of its value because of the wish of Carnegie officials that it remain in Washington.

Dr. Marvin's announcement of university expansion came at the conclusion of a talk in which he traced the history of the university from the time it was conceived by George Washington.

He quoted from the First President's will that the Nation's capital should support a national university.

"The Washington idea is growing," Dr. Marvin said.

Projecting the university into the future, he told the graduates and their friends who filled Constitution Hall to capacity that the university shortly will announce the formation of a new college that will provide an educational program for Government and other office employes similar to an extension service.

Degrees Conferred

During the ceremonies three students received degrees of doctor of philosophy. They are Harold Friedlander, associate bacteriologist with the National Institute of Health; Jack London Radomski, pharmacologist with the Food and Drug Administration, and Wayne David Rasmussen, agriculture historian with the Department of Agriculture.

Miss Elizabeth June Wrong, daughter of the Ambassador from Canada and Mrs. Hume Wrong, received a master of arts degree.

Doctor of education degrees were conferred on James Herrick Hall and Harold Maurice Wilson, lecturers in education at the university.

McKelway Honored

William Prentiss McKelway, son of Benjamin McKelway, editor of the Evening Star, was one of seven members of the school of medicine's graduating class to receive degrees with distinction. Others were Mrs. Eulaine Naiden, 230 North Thomas st., Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Miriam Seborer, 535 Mellon st. se.; John Lower Magness, Coshocton, Ohio; Harold Ellis Rhame, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Francis Neil Waldrop, 1111 Noyes dr., Silver Spring, Md., and Edwin Charles Wood, 1445 Otis pl. nw.

Dr. Colin Mackenzie Mackall, professor of chemistry at the university for 25 years, was retired with the honorary status of professor emeritus.

Alumni achievement awards were presented to Dr. Harry Fillmore Dowling, clinical professor of medicine at the university; Robert E. Freer, member of the board of trustees and former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and Miss Vivian Simpson, secretary of State of Maryland.

Parents Complain

Parents of some graduates complained though they had tickets for the graduation, they were unable to gain admittance to Constitution Hall.

They said ushers admitted everyone on a first-come basis until 7:40 p. m., when the hall was filled and the doors were closed. Thus, they said, parents with tickets were forced out by persons without tickets.

One explanation was that the graduation originally had been planned for out-of-doors, where an audience larger than Constitution Hall's 3800-plus capacity could have been accommodated. Inclement weather, however, forced the ceremonies indors.

makes recommendations for disposition of the cases.

The social workers, it was learned, believe that wherever possible, the young offenders should be rehabilitated within the community itself. They feel that offenders should be sent to institutions—such as the Federally operated National Training School—only as a last resort.

Laxity Intimated

Sources close to the court say the judge has given indications that she believes the social workers are too lax in some cases.

They, on the other hand, are reported to believe that she is handing out penalties in some cases that are more severe than the cases warrant.

Although no publicity is given to the activities of the court, an increase in commitments has been reported since Judge Cockrill was appointed. She was named last July because of the illness of Judge Fay Bentley, who voluntarily entered St. Elizabeth's Hospital after a breakdown.

Judge Cockrill's appointment is for a six-year term. Judge Bentley's position will be abolished under law at the end of her term, in 1952.

Other Differences

Another reported point of difference between the judge and her staff is her reputed insistence that social workers be on call outside the courtroom when cases they have investigated are to be heard. Social workers are believed to consider this lost time, since they could use this on-call period to handle other cases.

Another grievance, it was learned, is the efficiency ratings reviewed by the judge. Staff members reportedly believe that she has lowered ratings arbitrarily.

An advisory committee of civic leaders consults, from time to time, with the judge. The group more or less represents the public in court matters.

Some of the members of this committee are said to sense that the judge considers their counsel an intrusion.

In Charge of Work

Miss Clary is in charge of the social work department and Miss Fagrie is her top assistant.

Reporting to them are five case work supervisors and 32 probation officers.

The entire court staff consists of about 70 persons.

Miss Clary came to Washington in November, 1942, as director of soical work. Previously she was on the School of Social Work faculty at the University of Chicago, and had been with the Nebraska State Department of Child Welfare, as well as acting as State supervisor of the Transient Bureau in Omaha, Nebr.

Miss Fagrie came to the staff August, 1943, after having served with the Community Service Society of New York, the State Child Welfare Department of Nebraska, and the Family Service Society of Omaha.

Massman Plan Gets Approval

$226 was donated or pledged. Among those contributing were the American War Mothers, the Gold Star Wives, and the District Hotel Association. Arthur Clarendon Smith pledged $103, one for each of the 103 organizations to which he belongs.

The evening's enthusiasm was dampened slightly when an open letter favoring the fair from Billy Rose, columnist, to President Truman, was received coldly by Paul Miller, executive director of the District Hotel Association. Miller said the committee shouldn't "in any way" indorse Rose's sentiments.

J. A. Kamerow, whose temporary position as chairman was made permanent at the meeting, said the Evening Star has lost a "great deal of respect yesterday because it wrote an obituary while the body is still very much alive."

Elected with Kamerow to serve for 90 days were Horace J. Meyers, vice chairman; Arthur Clarendon Smith, treasurer; Jesse Manbeck, executive secretary; Vivian House, recording secretary, and a 19-man executive committee.

School Band Contest

Lions Clubs of District 22-C will hold their second annual school band contest at 2 p. m. Friday in Montgomery Blair High School stadium, Silver Spring, Md.

may boost the county's taxable assets by 10 million dollars this year, school officials feel the bond issue could be paid off without increasing the present tax rate of $2.65 on the $100 valuation.

The expenditure was planned to provide at least 11 new schools in the county and alterations or additions to virtually all of the other 40 schools in the system. It would include the county's first Negro high school, eliminating use of the regional Negro high school at Manassas, as much as 30 miles away from some points in the county.

The building program has been planned to meet existing needs by the 1950-51 school year, and to eliminate half-day classes which may be necessary in as many as 80 lower-grade schools next year, according to School Supt. W. T. Woodson.

Total cost of the projected program is about 12 million dollars, but school officials have expressed confidence they can obtain the remainder through outright State grants or loans from the State Literary Fund.

The $980,000 courthouse expansion program calls for construction of a two-story addition to the existing courthouse to provide office space, new courtrooms and a jail. The jail, which would occupy part of the second story of the structure, is planned to replace the present, obsolete county prison which has been the scene of two successful breaks in the last two years. Two other attempts were thwarted only after alert guards apprehended prisoners who had nearly succeeded in sawing their way out of the ancient building.

Although most voters balloted on both proposals, preelection campaign activity had centered primarily on the school bonds. Overshadowed by the size of the school proposal, the courthouse issue provoked little discussion, pro or con.

The Taxpayers Advisory Association, Fairfax Committee for Better Government and a number of individuals opposed the school bonds. It contended the expenditure is "unsuitable" and "unrealistic."

The better government committee based its opposition on the theory that residents of two "annexable" zones of the county would be subject to dual taxation if both the bond issue and annexation were successful.

Tax Theory Dispute

Most of the opposition was centered in a section of the county which is the subject of an annexation suit filed by the City of Falls Church. Some residents of the area feel, if it is annexed, they would be forced to assume the responsibility for part of the school bonds even though they would not benefit by the construction program.

School officials, the Fairfax School Emergency Committee and other organizations boosting the bond issue denied that an impartial annexation court would force them to assume the cost of a bond issue from which they would not benefit.

Proponents of the school program say it is the only practical answer to a problem which would leave the county with the alternatives of continued decline of the school system or "abnormally high" taxation for an immediate "pay-as-you-go" school building program.

Fuchs Aide Offers To Plead Guilty

Deportation Goal

Knauff Order Defended in M'Grath Brief

The Justice Department yesterday told the Supreme Court it was only doing its duty in trying to deport Mrs. Ellen Knauff, the German-born war bride the Government considers a security risk.

Mrs. Knauff has asked the Supreme Court to stay her deportation pending Congressional consideration of a bill to admit her legally despite the Attorney General's unfavorable opinion of her. The Government has refused to give the grounds on which it considers the woman a security risk, contending that to do so would compromise its informants. In answering her petition yesterday, the Government acidly told the high court:

"Certainly the fact that a bill designed to change the law insofar as it affects a particular person is pending before Congress does not make it unlawful for the administrative officials to enforce the law as it stands."

The House has approved the bill to admit Mrs. Knauff but a Senate subcommittee is awaiting Court determination of her case before acting. The Justice Department noted that, even if she is deported, Mrs. Knauff could re-enter the country if the bill becomes law.

Mrs. Knauff argued that the Government "invariably" holds up deportation proceedings when a bill affecting the person involved is pending in Congress. But the Government replied yesterday that this was not so and that the Knauff case, in fact, was the first such case involving an alleged security risk.

Jack Frye Asks Divorce

Prescott, Ariz., May 31 (U.P.).—Jack Frye, former president of Trans-World Airlines, filed a divorce suit today against his wife, Helen, the former wife of Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr. The suit, which charged cruelty, stated the Fryes were married in 1941.

Tombstone Kills Boy

Pontiac, Mich., May 31 (U.P.).—Three-year-old George Erikson was killed when a large tombstone fell on him during Memorial Day services yesterday.

Philadelphia, May 31 (AP).—Harry Gold, 39-year-old biochemist accused of divulging atom bomb secrets to Russia, told a Federal judge today he intended to plead guilty—but "not to the charge of meaning to hurt the United States."

U. S. District Judge James E. McGranery disclosed to newsmen that Gold told him he would plead guilty instead to acting a sa "courier for a Russian atom bomb spy ring."

"Gold said he wants the right to continue to cooperate with the FBI and that he will insist upon that right," the judge said.

Flanked by United States marshals, Gold was led down the hospital-like corridors of the Federal Building to Judge McGranery's chambers.

Before that the defendant, who had been brought to the city from outlying Holmesburg Prison, waited for nearly two hours in the marshal's cellroom for the interview he himself requested.

While Gold was being hustled back to prison, Judge McGranery called in newsmen and told them:

"Harry Gold came here this afternoon to ask the court to appoint counsel, which he insists be counsel whose patriotism is unimpeachable, with the respect of the court, the public and the bar.

He said he appreciates the loyal support of his father and mother and does not wish to place any additional burden upon them."

"While he will not be tried in this district," the judge said, "the charge that keeps him in custody is of so grave a nature that I feel it incumbent upon me to furnish him with counsel most capable."

The judge said he would nominate a man by Thursday afternoon, arrange for him to consult with Gold, and if agreeable all around, appoint that man Gold's counsel.

It was Judge McGranery who ordered Gold to prison in default of $100,000 bail at a swift-paced hearing, called late at night, following his arrest early last week.

Gold is charged with working as the intermediary through whom Dr. Klaus Fuchs, convicted British atom spy, delivered information about the atomic bomb to the Soviet Union.

FBI Reported Given 14 Names by Fuchs

London, May 31 (U.P.).—Dr. Klaus Fuchs has told American Federal Bureau of Investigation agents the names of 14 persons who helped him betray atom secrets to Russia, reliable sources said today.

Informants said Fuchs named the accomplices in a signed statement completed yesterday. The two FBI men who came here to question the confessed British spy were expected to return to Washington soon.

Independents Lead in Korea Assembly Vote

Seoul, May 31 (AP).—Independents bowled over many of President Syngman Rhee's party regulars in Tuesday's National Assembly election in South Korea.

Thus the veteran fighter for Korean independence faced a stiff challenge for control of his two-year-old government. Some independents support Rhee. Many more are middle-of-the-roaders.

Some independents were actively opposed by Rhee's forces. Three new assemblymen, in fact, were under arrest on election day. Charges against them ranged from suspected communism to election law violations. Communism, however, was not an election issue. Most candidates oppose the Reds.

The test will come after June 19, when the new 210-member National Assembly meets. The opposition is expected to introduce again a bill to strip Rhee of power in favor of a Prime Minister responsible ouly to the Assembly.

The election council reported 140 races had been decided and Independents won in 84 of them.

Rhee's supporters could find some solace in the fact that thus far, pro-Rhee Korean Nationalist candidates had won 18 seats and the friendly National Society had 11 more.

The Democratic Nationalists, leaders of the opposition, had won but 12 seats. The remaining decided contests were distributed among minor parties of varying loyalties.

Some of the independent strength could be attributed to resentment over higher taxes. This had been feared by Rhee when he tried to postpone the elections until November.

The United States State Department demanded early elections, and higher taxes to balance Korea's budget.

Europe Farm Recovery Tops War I Rate

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Europe's agriculture has made a much faster comeback from World War II than it did after World War I, the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations reports.

Gross agricultural output in the 1949-50 crop year was within 5 percent of prewar, J. H. Richter, head of the European Division of OFAR, said yesterday.

It would be farther along than that—perhaps above prewar—if it wasn't for the retarded recovery in the former enemy countries, Germany and Austria. These have reversed the course they took after the First World War. In the 1920s they were the first to get back to normal in farm production. Now they are producing on a level of only about two thirds of prewar.

Several countries are above the prewar production. These are the United Kingdom, Sweden, Belgium, the Netherlands and Norway.

Also showing increases are Greece and Portugal, but Dr. Richter's report states "there may be some question about the increase shown." But he adds that the increases in both are due to "an unusually large crop of olives."

"Switzerland and Italy," Richter goes on, "the latter also with a favorable olive crop, have probably reached the prewar production level.

"Ireland, Denmark and France are in an intermediate position of recovery, having reached more than 95 per cent of prewar output."

In fact, Richter reported, "for the European Recovery Program area as a whole the dependence on imported feedstuffs is but little over half what it was in the 1930s."

Richter's figures on European agriculture were made public with the first release of gross indices of agricultural production for the countries participating in the European Recovery Program. These indices were prepared for the Economic Cooperation Commission early in 1949 but for some unexplained reason, has issued as a restricted document. The last issue, now being published, was made last January 6. OFAR has been at work on the indices since early in 1942.

'Better Behave'

U.S. Is Tough With Jap Red Roughnecks

Tokyo, May 31 (AP).—American occupation officials, warning the Communists to "behave or else," today rushed eight Japanese to trial for physically attacking United States soldiers at a Red rally.

As the eight went on trial in occupation court, 200 Japanese students and workers milled outside the court building screaming demands for their comrades' release.

Police all over Japan were alerted for new outbreaks of Red violence expected Saturday. The Communists are expected to demonstrate and try to influence Sunday's election for the upper house of Parliament.

The grimness was apparent at General MacArthur's headquarters. The beating and stoning of five American soldiers yesterday was regarded as a Communist test and more violence was expected.

Burma Leader Plans Hermit Premiership

Rangoon, Burma, May 31. (AP).—Prime Minister Thakin Nu predicted early peace today with Karen tribesmen, the government's most formidable rebels, and declared he is going to be a hermit premier.

Just returned from a visit to Europe and London, the Prime Minister told a news conference he is renouncing the world and henceforth will live inside a thatched roof bambo hut, surrounded by barbed wire, on his ministerial estate north of Rangoon. He said he would emerge from a regime of prayer and dedication only when state affairs are the most demanding.

Thakin Nu said he was preparing to divest himself completely of political leadership and worldly things and dedicated his life to fasting and spiritual work because Buddhism teaches nothing in life is permanent.

He told reporters in London earlier this month he intended to become a monk when peace returns to the country. His government has set July 19 as a target date for peace.

The Prime Minister said there was "every possibility" the Karens will agree to end their 17-month rebellion in negotiations now going on.

A week ago the government announced a preliminary truce with about 10,000 White Band PVO's (Peoples Volunteer Organization), who for a time cooperated with the Communists. The truce remains to be approved by top PVO leaders.

Thakin Nu said the Karens were demoralized and sought peace but wanted assurance on three points: Pardon under the government's general amnesty, an autonomous state within the Karen union and reinstatement of Karen mutineers in the Burmese army. He said he had categorically ceded them the first two points but no mutineers would be reinstated in the army "under any circumstance."

Red Youths Pull Sitdown at Border Check

Luebeck, Germany, May 31 (AP).—Ten thousand German youths homeward bound from Berlin's Communist rally marooned themselves tonight in a dreary camp just inside the Iron Curtain.

They refused to comply with west Germany's police and health regulations, preferring instead to leave no record of the fact that they had hailed Stalin in the Whitsunday rally in eastern Berlin.

Cold and begrimed, the blueshirted members of the Communist-controlled Free German Youth (FDJ) lighted campfires and piled bundles of straw in open fields for beds.

Police said most of them were anxious to get home and were willing to comply with the regulations, but the active Communists were doing the thinking for the whole crowd.

They were camped at Eichholz, just outside Luebeck, a British zone city in Schleswig-Holstein. Here and at other zonal border points the young west Germans who took part in the Berlin rally were met with scorn and in some cases hostile outbreaks. Anti-Communist west Germans made no effort to conceal their disgust over the blueshirts. Police reinforcements were rushed to zonal border points.

The 10,000 marooned near here face demands by west German police that:

1. They register their names because they lack interzonal passes.

2. They undergo medical examinations to show they had not contracted typhoid or some other communicable disease while living in their cramped Berlin camps.

The FDJ members, some as young as 12, said they feared to register their names in the belief they would be blacklisted and fired from their jobs in their home towns in west Germany.

Police officials said an agreement was worked out with blueshirt leaders under which only FDJ members living in Schleswig-Holstein and nearby Hamburg would be required to register. The others would be given medical examinations but their names would not be taken. Only a few blueshirts moved across the zonal border after this compromise was reached.

At the no-man's land camp the more militant blueshirts formed a line 250 feet wide and five youths deep facing a row of West German police less than 20 feet away.

Scattered outbreaks of violence continued in the Helmstedt area, 113 miles south of here. One youth who entered Helmstedt had his medals ripped off.

The violence began in Helmstedt last night when several thousand anti-Communist Germans tangled with FDJ members who were singing the Internationale.

Unofficial estimates said 4000 police were mustered along the 36-mile Schleswig-Holstein border. A riot truck for throwing high pressure streams of water was brought up.

Some police were mounted. Others afoot were accompanied by police dogs. Some boarded small boats in the river north of Luebeck to keep young blueshirts from crossing without registering.

ADN, Soviet-licensed news agency, issued a drumfire of charges. It said numerous youths were beaten by police and one 12-year-old boy's back was broken; that another 13-year-old was bitten by a dog; that British armored units arrived and police threatened to shoot young Germans trying to cross the border.

Some of the youths slipped away and submitted to registration and medical examination at Luebeck. Police estimated about 1000 had registered by evening.

The diehards jeered and shouted "traitor" at them.

Though tired and grimy from their 100-mile trek from Berlin, the remaining youths danced and sang Communist and Russian folk songs. Soviet zone police brought up supplies of food and milk for them.

Other thousands of police from the American zone rushed to the crossing points of Hof and Coburg to back up border patrols. Communist buses and trains had discharged several hundred youth at those points.

About 200 tried to rush the border at Hof but were caught by police. They were turned loose.

As tension mounted in the Luebeck area the number of blueshirts in the Helmstedt area declined. The returning youth appeared to be detouring around Helmstedt to avoid the battering they received here last night. They were crossing singly and in pairs at points 15 miles north and 3 miles south.

Cherry Tree Donor Arrives

Yukio Ozaki and daughter, Mrs. Yukiki Soma, at Union Station

Force Holds Stalin, Ozaki Says

The Bernard Baruch of Japan, a diminutive wizened man of 91, arrived here yesterday to see the sights and to visit with American officials in the interests of peace.

One Washington landmark in particular interests Yukio Ozaki, Japan's best known "elder statesman" and the former mayor of Tokyo. It is the 3000 cherry trees, which he sent here in 1908 in appreciation of President Theodore Roosevelt's part in bringing an end to the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-05.

"I know I am too late for the blossoms," the erect little man said with a smile. "But I shall return and see them after I am 100."

He tapped his walking cane on the pavement of Union Station, tipped his gray fedora to dozens of well-wishers, and expounded in broken English his ideas on topics of the day:

"No one in the world can hold a position like Stalin for more than 10 years without force.

"I wish American forces will remain in Japan, for we cannot keep peace without them.

Ozaki wore the mien and dress of a statesman. His air was one of deference to his hosts, members of the American Council on Japan and the Washington chapter of the Japanese-American Society. His 5-foot frame was clad in striped trousers and black morning coat with a red insignia in the lapel denoting his membership in the Japanese House of Representatives.

The donor of the cherry trees will be feted by the Overseas Writers, the Library of Congress and William R. Castle, former American Ambassador to Japan, before continuing his goodwill tour of the United States.

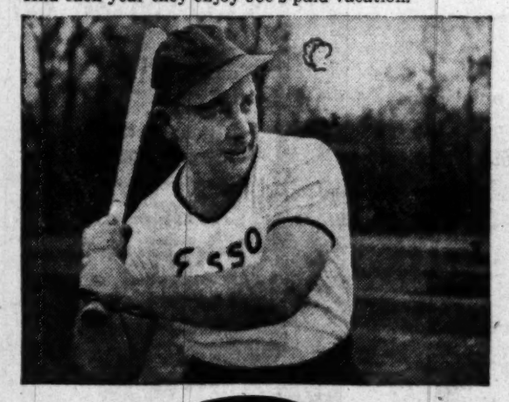
A man weighs many facts when he stays with a company 14 years

Take Esso mechanic Joseph A. McCann here, the father of bright young Joseph, Jr. below. Baby Joe puts a lot of weight into Joe's reasons for liking his job...

For example, the medical expense at his son's birth was paid for from Joe's Thrift Plan savings. And other things, too, mean security for the McCann family, like low-cost group insurance, sickness and accident benefits, and retirement at 65 with an income for life.

These on-the-job benefits are available to all Esso employees... a big reason why good workers like to stay with us—and average 13 years' service. Good jobs at Esso have helped us build an experienced team that you can depend on for honest product quality and value at the familiar red, white and blue Esso Sign.

JOE HAS PLAYED on softball and other Company teams. Company outings, too, mean fun for the McCann family. And each year they enjoy Joe's paid vacation.



A COMPANY AWARD is presented to Joe by his Division Manager for 10 years of safe driving. Company training has helped Joe advance on the job, earn more money.

More than just good workers on the job, Esso employees are good citizens, too—loyal supporters and active members of the communities where they work and live. And that's good for everybody!

Spencer Nominated for PUC

Kenneth W. Spencer, 49, was nominated by President Truman yesterday for a full three-year term starting July 1 as a member of the District Public Utilities Commission.

Spencer has been a PUC member since March, serving out the term of James W. Lauderdale resigned.

His nomination for the new term was sent to the Senate yesterday, and referred to the District Committee.

Spencer lives at 6800 6th st. nw. He is married and has one daughter.

Police Continue Quiz in Slaying of Cabbie

The mass questionings of Bolling Air Base personnel in Saturday morning's slaying of Gordon C. Brown have already provided investigators with a "definite pattern" in the crime, Lieut. Col. Kirby M. Gillette disclosed yesterday.

Gillette, in charge of Bolling's Office of Special Investigation, said his agents and Metropolitan Police detectives are questioning the 5000 airmen on the base "right down the line."

The 24-year-old, part-time cab driver was found fatally shot on a plot on the south end of the field. He had been choked and bludgeoned.

Masonic services for Brown will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. A coroner's jury yesterday was sworn in over the body to permit burial.

Fairfax Man's Daughter on Jury Misses Funeral

Bridgeport, Conn., May 31 (AP). A Stamford housewife today chose to remain on a first degree murder trial jury here instead of attending the funeral of her father Thursday at Fairfax, Va.

Mrs. Ellis S. Middleton was at the bedside of her father, Harry Blake, yesterday when he died. Unable to contact Superior Court officials here because of the Memorial Day holiday, Mrs. Middleton returned to Connecticut by air last night and reported for jury duty today.

She told Judge J. Howard Roberts that she would continue to serve on the jury although there is an alternate in the jury box available for duty.

The state is trying Frank C. Smith, 25, of Noroton, in connection with the fatal shooting of Grover S. Hart, 68.

World Monetary Fund Restrictions Asked

The top United States group on foreign financial matters said yesterday the World Monetary Fund should tighten up on dollar aid to its 47 member countries.

The fund was urged to set conditions specifically requiring return of the dollar "within a few years." Present repayment arrangements were held to be too indefinite.

The cabinet-level National Advisory Council delivered a special report to President Truman and Congress which also:

1. Hinted—without predicting—that a further devaluation of foreign currencies may be required as U. S. cash grants decline with the Marshall Plan moving to its scheduled end in 1952.

2. Declared fund members in Europe and elsewhere should make greater efforts to get rid of the restrictions they now impose on trade and money-exchange transactions.

Council members signing the report included Treasury Secretary Snyder, the chairman; Secretary of State Acheson and Foreign Aid Administrator Paul G. Hoffman.

The council's sharp comments on the fund's progress toward the objectives for which it was set up at the 1944 Bretton Woods (New Hampshire) conference contrasted with council remarks about the World Bank.

The Bank, which differs from the related fund in that it gets capital from private investors as well as from Government subscriptions, was credited with "considerable progress."

But the fund was advised that it must be stricter on applicants for dollar-aid lest aid-seeking countries exhaust the $2,760,000,000 in gold and dollars left in the fund.

And the council declared the "slow rate of progress" in the fund's efforts to reduce trade and money-exchange restrictions "has been a disappointment," even recognizing the "special difficulties" beyond control of the fund organization.

The fund is headed by Belgium's Camile Gutt, the bank by Eugene Black of the United States.

The council said that while the fund "was not intended to provide long-term loans," under present conditions the dollar aid it furnishes is "practically equivalent to an unsecured loan with no very precise conditions for repayment."

The fund has advanced over 750 million dollars to 19 members, with Britain getting 300 million dollars, France, 125 million dollars, and India, 100 million dollars.

Vice Squad Has Shakeup

Ewen, to No. 2; Precinct Detective Michael Apperti, to the sex squad; Probational Detective Everett L. Cooper, to the Detective Bureau; Pvt. Louis T. Williams to No. 7 in uniform; Louis R. Screen to No 13 in uniform; Orville L. Erfert, to No. 9 in plain clothes, and Salvatore Greco to the robbery squad.

McCarty, who has been head of both the robbery and sex squads, returns to the Detective Bureau.

The Vice Squad normally is composed of three units, two of which are assigned to gambling, the third to prostitution and moral perversion. Six men also operate under cover.

McCarty headed one of the anti-gambling units, and Bonaccorsy will get his job, according to Barrett's secretary, Lieut. Louis Peters.

Peters stressed the fact that the new members of the Vice Squad are not being transferred, but only detailed to the squad. They still will be regularly assigned to the jobs they are leaving, Peters said.

In March, 1949, the Police Complaint Review Board dropped charges against Espuct involving an alleged beating of two boys during questioning about a housebreaking.

In October, 1943, McEwen was demoted from detective sergeant "for the good of the service" because of conduct unbecoming an officer. The charges were not amplified.

Czechs Order Death Penalty For General

Prague, May 31 (U.P.)—Czechoslovakia has sentenced a general staff colonel to death on charges he was a spy for the United States, it was disclosed today as a trial opened for 13 other Czechs accused of plotting with Westerners to overthrow the Communist government.

The official newspaper Rovnost reported at Brno that Col. J. Robitka received the death penalty there on May 27 on charges of working for the United States espionage service.

The newspaper said 11 members of his group, either army officers or members of the SNB (security police) received terms of 10 years to life imprisonment.

The first of the 13 defendants at the mass trial in Pankrac prison, Dr. Milada Horakova, 49-year-old former member of Parliament, pleaded "fully guilty." She said she had been in contact with former French Ambassador Maurice Dejean with "the aim of bringing about a change in the regime."

A 37-page indictment charged all 13 conspired with more than 20 Western nation officials and newspaper correspondents, headed by Dejean and the late United States Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt to overthrow the government in 1948 and 1949.

Truman Asks Welfare Unit

Administration on the revisions but that neither made advance commitments on the proposed new department.

Both plans would take effect in 60 days unless "vetoed" by a majority of the full membership of either House.

The functions of the proposed new Department of Health, Education and Security would cover about the same ground as the present Federal Security Agency.

As a concession to the opposition, Mr. Truman provided that the Public Health Service and the Office of Education will remain intact, although they are transfered to the new agency.

"The Surgeon General and the Commissioner of Education will have the same relationship to the Secretary of the new department as they now have to the Federal Security Administrator," he said in his message.

The Senate killed the original plan last August 16 after opponents charged it would subordinate the health and education agencies to a politically chosen appointee. The name of Oscar Ewing as the probable head of the new agency figured in the fight. Ewing is a leading supporter of the President's compulsory health insurance plan, and opponents feared a "socialized medicine" move.

Under the new plan, the President would appoint, and the Senate confirm, the Surgeon General, the Commissioner of Education and the Commissioner of Social Security, just as they would the new secretary.

Mr. Truman further assured Congress that his new plan "neither provides for any new program nor extends or enlarges existing programs beyond the scope of present legislation."

He said he changed the name to the "Department of Health, Education and Security" because: "In the minds of some the title 'Department of Welfare', which was used in the 1949 plan, did not adequately comprehend the health and educational functions and implied their subordination."

With one exception, the proposal is in line with the Hoover Commission's recommendation that social security and education functions be given departmental status. The lone variance was inclusion of the health agencies. The Hoover report favored centering all Federal health activities under a separate United Medical Administration.

Mr. Truman noted this, but told Congress his plan would not in any way interfere with later "adjustments" in the functions of the new department.

Terming the proposed set-up "long overdue" he suggested the new Cabinet official could bring about greater efficiency and "worthwhile" economies by centralizing procurement, budget and accounting services for the consolidated agencies.

In submitting his new Treasury streamlining plan, he bowed once again to the opposition. His original Treasury plan was rejected by the Senate, 65 to 13, on May 11, after opponents charged it would deprive the Comptroller of the Currency of his present independent status.

The new Treasury plan is identical with the first except for the flat exemption for the Comptroller of the Currency. Centering functions of other Treasury units under the Secretary, Mr. Truman said the reform is "essential to the clarification of the lines of authority and responsibility" he is seeking to achieve throughout the Federal Government.

Giant FOOD DEPARTMENT STORES

Acceptable for GIANT Top Notch BEEF

3572 A
ARMOUR AND COMPANY
GENERAL OFFICES, UNION STOCK YARDS
CHICAGO 9, ILLINOIS

April 20, 1950

Giant Food Department Stores
P. O. Box 1804
Washington 13, D. C.

Dear Sirs:

Your specifications for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef are most rigid, and a lot goes on behind the scenes to produce and select the small percentage of cattle that will meet your exacting specifications.

BREEDING Only certain pure strain breeds of cattle will efficiently convert corn and other feeds into GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef.

FEEDING It takes many months of scientific feeding on a diet principally of corn to produce GIANT TOP-NOTCH quality.

BUYING It takes qualified livestock buyers, with years of experience, to recognize GIANT TOP-NOTCH quality in cattle on the hoof.

PROCESSING Extensive facilities are necessary for converting these cattle into GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef to retain all of the quality and goodness that the producer has painstakingly built into the cattle with many months of careful feeding.

SELECTION To the eye of the expert beef grader, who makes the final selection of GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef, this quality is indicated by "marbling", "covering" and "finish" -- referring to the distribution of fat through the red meat and the texture of the meat.

We selected our Omaha and Sioux City plants as the primary source of supply for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef as these plants are located in the heart of the corn country and, throughout the year, their receipts of the best grades of cattle will be more consistent than other markets.

Proof of the rigidity of your specifications for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef is best indicated by the fact that, in the total production of cattle at Omaha, only 15 out of every 100 would be acceptable for GIANT TOP-NOTCH selection; at Sioux City, only 14 out of every 100 would be acceptable. OF THE COMBINED PRODUCTION AT ALL ARMOUR PLANTS, ONLY 12 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOULD BE ACCEPTABLE FOR GIANT TOP-NOTCH.

Our 80 years of experience in the beef business is an insurance policy that underwrites the quality of every cut of GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef produced in Armour plants.

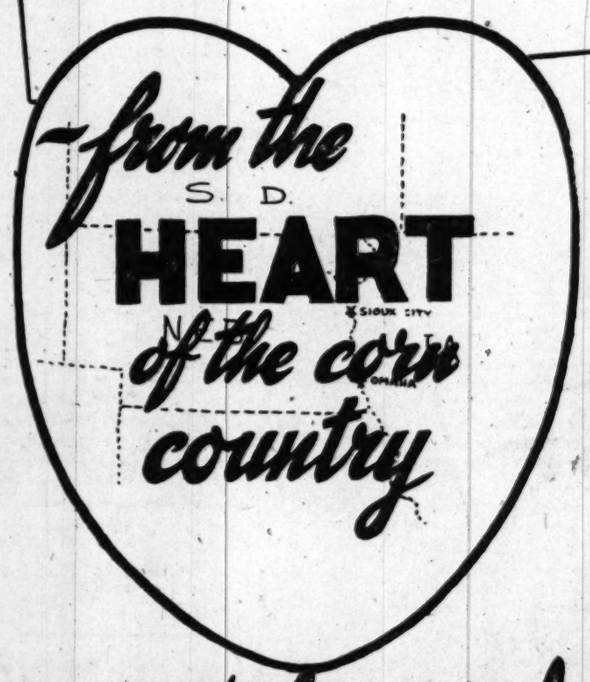
Yours very truly,
P A Greene
ARMOUR AND COMPANY

Everyone knows ARMOUR AND COMPANY is one of the nation's primary sources of fine beef. Through 80 years, its skilled representatives have made the contacts and built an organization that permits them to secure first choice from the finest herds in the United States.

Experts know, too, that the heart of the corn country supplies the finest beef cattle. Omaha and Sioux City are the principal points from which Armour gets the beef cattle it sends to GIANT.

Likewise, ARMOUR is the primary source from which GIANT obtains its huge supply of fine western corn-fed steer beef it sells every week to thousands of its customers who have learned the satisfaction and economy that results from "practicing the GIANT shopping habit."

None is better qualified than ARMOUR to comment upon the exacting standards GIANT sets for its "Top Notch" quality beef. Read, in the letter reproduced here, what ARMOUR says about the rigidity of our specifications—that "of the combined production at all Armour plants, only 12 out of every 100 (cattle) would be acceptable for Giant Top-Notch!"



U. S. Department of Agriculture quotations on western dressed beef show that each grade, whether "good" or "choice", has a wholesale price difference as high as 4c a pound. Therefore, if it is possible to pay as much as 4c a pound difference for the same grade, there must be a difference in the quality! GIANT always pays "top" price to be sure of getting the grade's TOP quality.

WELL Bred . . .

Only certain pure-strain breeds of cattle efficiently convert corn and other foods into beef of "Top Notch" quality. White-faced Herefords and Black Angus are two of the most famous of these pure-strain breeds.

WELL Fed . . .

Many months of scientific feeding on a carefully selected diet, principally of corn, are necessary to produce beef of the "Top Notch" quality you'll find in GIANT'S many stores serving the entire metropolitan area of the Nation's Capital.

WELL Finished . . .

"Finish" means texture. Beef of "Top Notch" quality is of perfect texture, and has exactly the right distribution of fat through the red meat, the combination needed to produce finest flavor and greatest tenderness.

NO Commercial Graded Meat ever sold at your GIANT!

Grand Jury Cites Erickson on 60 Counts

New York, May 31 (AP).—A rackets-probing New York County grand jury today charged bigtime gambler Frank Erickson with bookmaking and conspiracy.

It returned a 60-count information against the 54-year-old Erickson who years ago tossed aside a waiter's apron to become in time admitted boss of a multimillion dollar gambling empire. Conviction on the multicount charge carries a maximum penalty of a $500 fine and a year in jail on each count.

The jury's findings climaxed an investigation begun by the district attorney's office in April 1948, as an outgrowth of an inquiry into an attempt to fix a professional football game.

Bit by bit, the investigation slowly pieced together evidence linking Erickson to his far-flung gambling operations. Then last May 1, District Attorney Frank S. Hogan's raiders swooped down on the gambler's Park ave. office and seized a truckload of documents.

The documents, over the protests of Erickson counsel, were submitted to the grand jury.

"Biggest Bookie in United States"

Hogan called Erickson the "biggest and most notorious bookmaker in the United States," and said that over the past 20 years he "has broken the law of this State and every other State in our country."

The raid on Erickson's headquarters, the district attorney said, might have been postponed for a while if the gambler's disclosures before a Senate committee last month had not made it "imperative" to move quickly.

Testifying before the committee investigating interstate crime, Erickson told the Senators his $12,500,000-a-year gambling operations netted him $100,000 a year. Hogan said he was afraid the gambler might hide or do away with his records after his Senate appearance.

The paunchy, poker-faced gambler pleaded innocent when he was arraigned on the information. He showed no emotion but his voice was almost inaudible. He was freed on $10,000 bail, and trial was set for June 12.

The information listed 59 counts of bookmaking and one of conspiracy. The latter charge extends over a 20-year period. The statute of limitations does not apply in the conspiracy cases because of the continued existence of the alleged conspiracy. The bookmaking charges go back only two years.

An information was returned rather than an indictment since the charges against Erickson are misdemeanors. Indictments are returned only in felony cases.

The dapper gambler has had numerous brushes with the law and with municipal authorities. The late Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, who often referred to Erickson as a "tinhorn punk," once warned him he'd have him clapped into jail "if he sticks his nose back in New York." Erickson was in Florida at the time.

Convicted as Vagrant

In one of his comparatively few court appearances, Erickson, accused of being a vagrant, slapped $125,000 in securities down on a courtroom table to prove that he wasn't. He was convicted anyway under a clause defining a vagrant as a person with "no apparent business or profession who maintains himself principally by gambling."

Hogan said the information mentioned only one other person, Harry Richards, named as a co-conspirator. Richards, reputed financial front man for the gambler, has been held in $100,000 bail as a material witness since the raid on Erickson's office.

The 59 bookmaking counts list a total of $86,788 allegedly bet with Erickson over the period from June, 1948, to April, 1950. Hogan said this total constituted only a "minute fraction" of the money wagered and that the information could have contained as many as "10,000 counts."

The information charged that Erickson bought thousands of dollars worth of presents for his clients at Christmas time. In 1948, he gave away 1000 gold tie clasps that cost him $29,000, the jury report said.

Cohen Is Linked to Florida which may run as high as six million dollars a year.

Crime Committee sources represent the committee as very well satisfied with the information picked up in the two-day Florida trip. Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) was in New York yesterday, reportedly checking some of it with New York officials. There has been a great deal of swapping of data in the Frank Erickson case. That pudgy gambler had the book thrown at him yesterday by a New York grand jury.

If current plans hold, it is understood, the committee may hold open hearings in about three weeks on the Florida phase of the case. Hearings may be either in Florida or in Washington, or both.

Meanwhile, the House Interstate Commerce Committee today is to continue open hearings on the Senate approved bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines. Two days of hearings are planned before an executive session to consider the bill and what to do about it.

J. C. Wells Quits Job as Associate Counsel of NLRB

Joseph C. Wells, associate general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, resigned yesterday to enter private practice in South Carolina.

With the NLRB since 1944, Wells was for the past three years a key aide to General Counsel Robert N. Denham in carrying out the investigatory and prosecuting functions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Wells would have quit earlier, according to friends, but stayed on to join Denham in the successful battle to block President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12, which would have abolished the general counsel's office.

A graduate of National University here, Wells comes from Ashland, Ohio.

Better Than Any Other Way of Preventing Tooth Decay According to Published Reports!

TWO years' research at five leading universities—case histories of hundreds of people who used Colgate Dental Cream right after eating—shows that the Colgate way stops tooth decay best! Better than any other home method of oral hygiene known today!

Recently, a leading dental journal reported results of exhaustive tests on tooth decay. In these tests, Colgate Dental Cream was used right after eating. Over a two-year period, both clinical and X-ray examinations showed the Colgate way stopped more decay for more people—than ever before reported in all dentifrice history on tooth decay!

Even more important, there were no new cavities whatever for more than 1 out of 3. Think of it! Not even one new cavity in two full years! No other dentifrice, only Colgate Dental Cream, has proof of such results—the best results ever reported in authoritative dental literature for a dentifrice of any type!

So start your family on Colgate Dental Cream today! Children love Colgate's wake-up flavor—so it's easy to get them to use Colgate Dental Cream correctly. No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But the Colgate way is the most effective way yet known to help your dentist prevent decay!

No Other Toothpaste or Powder AMMONIATED OR NOT Offers Proof of Such Results!

Stories of Amerasia 'Top Secrets' Denied

ney in a Capitol office and asked him, regarding each document separately, whether five of the items listed in the news stories were actually among the Amerasia documents.

On four of the items his answer was a flat no. On the fifth, he said the document would have to be identified more precisely before he could give a positive answer, but he could think of nothing of that general nature.

McInerney said he was thoroughly familiar with the 900-odd originals and 800 more duplicates of documents taken by the FBI from the Amerasia magazine offices and from the homes of two of the six defendants in the case. Furthermore, he said, he was familiar with the 20-odd documents seized earlier from the offices in an OSS raid.

If any items like those mentioned in the stories were among the documents, he said, he would know about them.

The two newspaper syndicates did not give the source for their stories, but both said the reports were confirmed by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), a member of the Senate subcommittee investigating the Amerasia case along with other charges of communism in government.

Hickenlooper in Iowa

Hickenlooper, however, has been in Iowa for a week or more. He declared in an interview there yesterday that his knowledge of the documents found in the Amerasia haul came from Robert M. Morris, counsel of the Republican minority on the investigating subcommittee.

Meantime, Senator Tydings (D., Md.), the subcommittee chairman, said he had never seen such documents as those described by the newspaper syndicate stories, and added:

"It's too bad Senator Hickenlooper hasn't heard all the testimony. I wish he had."

At the same time, Edward Morgan, principal subcommittee counsel said he also had not seen the documents described in the stories, although he conceded that he had not yet gone through all of the many hundred sheets of paper seized. They are now in Justice Department custody.

McInerney testified about the case before a House Judiciary subcommittee in 1946, and only recently testified again in secret session before the Tydings subcommittee.

Yesterday, that group heard two more Justice officials tell of the situation. One was Assistant FBI Director Louis B. Nichols and the other was D. Milton Ladd, assistant to the director, and principal FBI officer in charge of the Amerasia case at the time of the arrests.

Tydings quoted the two men as telling his subcommittee after they had testified "You have all the testimony we have touching the Amerasia case."

Six people were arrested when the raids were made in June 1945. A grand jury declined to indict three and prosecution was later dropped against a fourth, Philip J. Jaffe, editor of the magazine, pleaded guilty to illegal possession of Government documents and was fined $2500. The sixth man arrested, Immanuel S. Larsen, pleaded nolo contendere and was fined $500.

The Tydings Subcommittee plans to question Larsen on his part in the case, possibly on Monday afternoon. The other five defendants in the 1945 case also will be questioned after Lorsen, Morgan said.

Ever since the conclusion of legal proceedings on the case, there have been widespread charges in and out of Congress that the case was "whitewashed" and the prosecution "mishandled."

The five "state secrets" documents allegedly in the Amerasia haul about which reporters questioned McInerney, were:

1. A listing of the location of American fleet units in the Pacific, as of a date in 1945. McInerney, denying the existence of this item among the papers taken, noted that there was, however, a listing of Japanese naval units.

Counter-Intelligence Plan

2. A Naval plan for wartime counter-intelligence operations, sent by Naval Intelligence to intelligence officers of the 14 American naval districts.

3. A document over Secretary of State Hull's signature apparently picturing Amerasia magazine "as a veritable bible on what to do in the Far East."

4. A message from President Roosevelt to Chiang Kai-shek, with the most secret classification of "eyes only"—meaning only for the eyes of Chiang—relating to organization of the military command in China.

5. A "hush-hush" document on the operations plan of a Government agency. This was the only item the existence of which McInerney declined to deny flatly, until it was better identified.

Icebreakers Stuck In Ice, Reds Still Say

Russia notified the United States yesterday it will have to wait at least five months more before getting back two lend-lease icebreakers.

The two vessels are stuck in Arctic ice, Soviet Charge d'Affaires Vladimir Bazykin told Undersecretary of State James E. Webb.

There's no need to stay home this weekend. You can have the time of your life at The Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament and the Bob Hope Show.

Arlington School Decision Reversed

tify further proceedings on their behalf in the District Court."

Charging the state with responsibility to meet the "burdens inherent in segregation," Judge Soper added:

"Nor can it be said that a scholar who is deprived of his due must apply to the administrative authorities and not to the courts for relief.

"An injured person must, of course, show that the state has denied him advantages accorded to others in like situations, but when this is established, his right of access to the court is absolute and complete."

In a point-by-point review of the comparable physical facilities and educational opportunities of the two schools, Judge Soper found that "the physical plant and equipment at Hoffman-Boston in important respects compares unfavorably with that at Washington-Lee."

Differences favoring Washington-Lee were held to be found in machine shops, science laboratories, libraries, music rooms, athletic plants, infirmaries, and cafeterias.

Activity Chances Held Denied

Judge Soper noted that none of the "various extracurricular activities" at Washington-Lee are available to the pupils at Hoffman-Boston.

"The failure to provide these opportunities cannot be defended on the ground that their absence is mainly attributable to the size or location of the school," the decision said.

The appellate court than rebuked school authorities for requiring a demand for certain courses at Hoffman-Boston before they are offered while providing them for Washington-Lee students without demand or request.

"This difference in procedure cannot be sustained," Judge Soper wrote.

"It places a burden upon the colored student and deprives him of the opportunity of taking a course of instruction unless he has determined to take it months in advance, whereas the white student may apply at the opening of the session and obtain the desired instruction."

When Judge Soper's decision was announced yesterday, Arlington Superintendent of Schools William A. Early, a defendant in the case with the county school board, said that "there will be no more action until I get my instructions from the lower court."

Lawrence Douglas, attorney for the school board, said he could not say whether he would appeal the decision. He indicated that two school segregation cases now pending before the Supreme Court "might bear directly on this case."

Mrs. Edmund Campbell, chairman of the county school board said, "There is just nothing more we can do."

She pointed out that the board has already begun construction of a Hoffman-Boston elementary school building at a cost of $200,000. Its completion will enable the transfer of 167 elementary school children from the present Hoffman-Boston building, thereby providing more facilities for pupils on the high school level.

Boston Publishers Reject Bargaining With Joint Council

Boston, May 31 (AP).—Publishers of Boston's eight daily newspapers today rejected the first attempt in a major city for city-wide agreements on pensions, health and welfare.

A joint council of 11 CIO, AFL and independent newspaper unions reported that a spokesman for the publishers said they would continue to negotiate with individual unions.

The council announced it would ask the Federal Mediator and Conciliation Service "to assist us in showing the Boston publishers the error of their ways."

If that fails, the council said, it will report back to the members of the individual unions for further action.

The council embraces locals of these AFL unions: Typographical, Mailers, Stereotypers, Pressmen, Photo Engravers, Newspaper Drivers, Teamsters, Plate Boys and Paper Handlers, the Independent Machinists District 38 and the CIO American Newspaper Guild.

Council Rehires Garbageman Fired For Aping Queen

Bebington, England, May 31 (AP). The city council took pity today on Sidney Cooper and gave him back the job he lost for driving his garbage truck in Queen Elizabeth's procession. He also was accused of taking bows for cheers intended for the Queen.

Cooper denied it. He said he just got caught in the traffic and couldn't get out.

Friends sent a petition asking the Queen to intervene on Cooper's behalf. They received a formal acknowledgement, but the council said there was no royal request to put Cooper back on the job he had held for 17 years.

He was rehired and his right to a pension restored, the council said, as an "act of clemency"

Alabama's Truman Democrats Cinch Control of State Machine

Birmingham, Ala., May 31 (AP).—Alabama Democrats loyal to the national party have cinched control of State party machinery they wrested from States Righters.

Regular Democrats won five of seven places on the State Democratic Executive Committee in yesterday's runoff primary, on the basis of unofficial but apparently conclusive returns.

Loyalists captured 38 seats on the 72-man committee in the May 2 primary, but four places were contested by States Righters.

By taking five places in the Sixth District runoff yesterday, the regular Democrats were assured of 39 seats—for a majority—even if the contested seats were lost.

States Righters added the two runoff seats in the Ninth (Birmingham) District to the 26 won in the first primary. One other winner May 2 was committed to neither side.

The majority membership on the State Committee thus reverts to regular Democrats. The committee controls party machinery in Alabama.

Kenneth A. Roberts, Anniston attorney, apparently won the Fourth District seat in Congress in his runoff with Probate Judge Wilber B. Nolen of Ashland. Representative Sam Hobbs did not seek renomination because of ill health.

A count of 196 of the district's 243 boxes showed Roberts, 12,700; Nolen, 9709.

Four Alabama Congressmen won nomination May 2. The other four were unopposed.

Fined in Hours Case

Samuel Melnick, owner of New York Dry Goods Store, 819 H st. ne., pleaded guilty yesterday and was fined $50 for employing women more than eight hours a day.

Wadsworth and Michener Will Retire After 30 Years

Geneseo, N. Y., May 31 (AP).—Representative James W. Wadsworth, author of the World War I draft law and co-author of the second World War Selective Service Act, said today he would not seek another term in Congress.

The 72-year-old New York Republican said he had decided to retire at the end of his current term January 3.

He served 12 years in the Senate, from 1915 to 1927. In World War I he was chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee He is completing his eighteenth year in the House. Before going to Washington he served six years in the New York Assembly.

Wadsworth was elected to the Senate in 1914 and reelected in 1920.

Norman H. Boss, Aide At Smithsonian, Retires

Norman H. Boss, whose own bones are still active after 46 years working with fossils at the Smithsonian Institution, retired yesterday.

The 64-year-old native Washingtonian put in his last day at the United States National Museum as chief of the fossil-bone laboratory, where most of the institution's big display of dinosaurs is Boss's handiwork.

Ever since 1903, when he became interested in dinosaur fossils (some are said to date back 200 million years), Boss has devoted his life to giving thousands a look at animal life of the distant past.

Park of his job has been digging fossil bones of "superlizards" out of rock which has preserved them for centuries. This is called "freeing the fossils from the matrix." The next step is to "articulate," or pose, the skeleton in the position in which it was found in the earth.

He and Mrs. Foss, who have lived at 824 Longfellow st. nw., will move to Cononial Beach, Va.

Smithsonian Editor Retires After 36 Years

Webster P. True, 57, a native Washingtonian and chief of Smithsonian Institution's editorial division, retired yesterday after 36 years' service with that organization.

True

He received his first appointment to the Smithsonian in 1914, a year after graduating from Hamilton College. His father, Zoologist Frederick W. True, had served before him as head curator of biology and later as assistant secretary at the institution.

On his return in 1919 from Army duty overseas, Webster True was appointed editor of Smithsonian Institution, and in 1931, with the institution's reorganization, he was placed in charge of all editorial activities of Smithsonian and its branches.

An author of many articles and books, True's latest book is "The Smithsonian: America's Treasure House."

He plans to retire with his family to their summer home at North Brooklin, Me., where he expects to continue his writing. He has lived here at 3430 Porter st. nw.

William N. Handiboe, D. C. Employe, Retires

William H. Handiboe, 67, retiring after 46 years in the District Government, was presented $700 and a television set yesterday at a ceremony staged by fellow workers in the District Building board room.

Handiboe has been assistant clerk of the Engineer Department for 33 years.

Wife's Health Causing Michener to Retire

Representative Earl C. Michener (R., Mich.) announced yesterday he is retiring at the end of this term after 30 years in Congress.

He said his wife's ill health is the reason for his decision to quit.

Michener, 73, is ranking Republican on the House Judiciary Committee. He was its chairman in the Eightieth Congress.

First elected to Congress in 1918, he served seven consecutive terms and then lost in the 1932 Democratic landslide. But he returned in 1934 and won eight more consecutive terms.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief — help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Planners On The Spot

Over a long period of years Washington has been frustrated in its efforts to clean up and abolish its extensive slum areas. Only during the years immediately preceding World War II was any substantial slum-clearance program carried out. The work was necessarily suspended during the war, and great difficulty has been encountered in getting it under way again. One factor was the decision of Congress that the new effort should be on a more comprehensive basis than was the old. It created the Redevelopment Land Agency to carry out the work of buying and clearing slum areas which need to be entirely rebuilt. Since this work had to be integrated with the general planning for the Capital City, that function was turned over to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The construction and management of low-rental housing to replace the slums was left to the National Capital Housing Authority. Then the whole elaborate arrangement was left high and dry with no funds on which to operate.

The community has thus been accustomed to the idea that the frustration of the slum-clearance program stems from the denial of funds. Now that idea must be changed. Funds are suddenly within the grasp of local agencies. Last September the Public Housing Administration made a planning loan to the NCHA, with indications that loans to finance the construction of 4000 low-rent dwellings will be forthcoming if the detailed plans are approved. Now the Housing and Home Finance Agency has set aside $2,250,000 for grants to the local Land Agency as soon as it has developed plans for specific projects. In other words, the money is now ready to flow. Where are the necessary plans?

In recent weeks the Park and Planning Commission has been bestirring itself to get plans prepared. A coordinating committee representing all the agencies concerned is expected to come in with definite recommendations at the commission's June meeting. These are awaited with great interest, for the program will continue to be stymied until sites for clearance have been selected. It is true that the NCHA now has separate authority to choose sites of its own and it already possesses some vacant land that will be used. But only the Land Agency is in line for the redevelopment grants which are necessary to defray the expenses of clearing slum sites and reducing the cost of the land to a point where it can be used for public housing within the limits that the PHA prescribes. In short, it is the planners that are now on the spot, and the public will be expecting them to put forth a maximum effort to get this work started.

Political Refugees

The displaced persons bill adopted by the House contains a provision omitted in the Senate version to admit 15,000 political refugees who reached, or may reach, the free zones of Europe from behind the Iron Curtain after the deadline for normal eligibility for admission to the United States. Such refugees are reported to be streaming across the borders at a rate of several thousand a month. They represent a political as well as a compelling human problem. We hope that the House approach to this problem will prevail in conference.

From the political point of view, to ignore these persons who have fled from Communist tyranny is to give an important impetus to Soviet propaganda. They have come in quest of freedom and opportunity—the twin hopes that have traditionally drawn men to seek asylum here. If all hope is denied them, perforce they will return—and are, indeed, returning—to the lands from which they fled, embittered and disillusioned, to be pointed out by the Soviet propagandists as object lessons of American indifference and inhumanity. From the humanitarian point of view, their plight is a peculiarly appealing one. There is no safe conduct back behind the Iron Curtain for those who have once tried to escape to freedom.

Against these considerations it must be admitted there is a risk that some of the political refugees will be Communist agents in disguise. The Communists will certainly try to infiltrate. The risk cannot be ignored. But it can be dealt with, and minimized, by meticulous scrutiny and screening. With proper precautions, it is a risk worth running for the sake of the values that are at stake. Calculated risks are a necessary element of cold war.

Mr. Acheson Reports

How far we have traveled since Secretary Hull began the practice of reporting a foreign mission to the assembled Congress! It was on November 18, 1943, that Mr. Hull, fresh from Moscow, told the Legislature of his signature of a declaration of intent to join a United Nations organization. It was a brave new world that Mr. Hull was seeking to usher in. As the provisions are carried into effect, Mr. Hull said, "there will no longer be a need for spheres of influence, for alliances, for a balance of power or any of the special arrangements through which, in the unhappy past, nations strove to safeguard their security or to promote their interests." Congress cheered words, so reminiscent of Woodrow Wilson's after the First World War, that were full of promise and determination. From then on Congress cooperated with the Executive in trying to realize the greatest dream of the ages—a world in which, as Confucius put it, all men are brothers.

Six and a half years later, one of the executants of Mr. Hull's policy, now Secretary of State, appeared before Congress, reporting on a very different mission. Mr. Acheson's errand had to do with precisely what Mr. Hull seven years before said was forever eschewed—an alliance, the balance of power. He reported on the way the North Atlantic Alliance had been tightened, and outlined the present condition of the balance of power in Russo-Western relations. However, there was no disillusionment in Mr. Acheson's presentation, nor did Congress applaud as a body reacting to hopes unfulfilled. So much water has gone under the bridge since 1943 that there was probably no realization either in Mr. Acheson's mind or among his audience of the difference in the direction of our travels.

Or is it so different? Those who still keep hope in their hearts will say that the present task is to consolidate a stage in the quest for a functioning world organization. This is what Secretary Acheson tried to do in the capitals of Europe. He spoke of the Atlantic Community, not the Alliance, and his choice of the word community has the connotation of common tasks to be done in common, though in a two-world setting. Mr. Acheson brought back from Paris agreement on a common Atlantic approach to the Middle East. A similar undertaking in southeast Asia, in spite of the American commitment in Indo-China, is still elusive, but men of good will, having worked in Sydney as well as in London, are engaged on such a project, and a comprehensive (and, we trust comprehending) policy appears to be in the making. The community will also have an organization of deputies to sit and direct its affairs continuously.

There is no blinking the fact, of course, that the core of the community is an armed alliance. This is a response to the rediscovery, in Mr. Lange's words, that "peace will never be secure in a world where democracies are weak and dictatorships alone are strong." Peace through strength, evidently, was the tone of the conferences, and it was fortified by Mr. Schuman's move to integrate Europe's coal and steel—the most spectacular, if incidental, aspect of the conferences. This pacific tone finds expression in the Acheson phraseology, and it underlies the setting up of deputies charged with seeing that economics are not sacrificed to armaments. The "revolutionary" concept of a balance in collective forces, or a united defense to which the Atlantic nations will contribute according to their several abilities, has an importance beyond its meaning in military defense. It should be regarded as a means of backing into integration for peaceful purposes, for if there can be specialization for war, the same technique can be applied to constructive ends. Hence the great merit of the Schuman proposal. Here is an example of the unity that makes for strength—the unity of peoples working together with a sense of mission beyond mere storm cellar survival, but in an unafraid quest for coprosperity.

This is the only realistic way left to uphold the ideals of the United Nations that Mr. Hull pioneered. The world as one must remain in men's hearts till a better season. And if the United Nations, as its organizational expression, may have disappointed men's hopes as an instrumentality, nevertheless it has to be saved not only as a goal, but as a living organization to be put to instant service whenever the occasion offers.

Intelligence Director

Reports persist that the Navy is expecting Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, the director of the Central Intelligence Agency, back on military duty in July. If these reports are true, the selection of a qualified successor becomes a security consideration of the first magnitude—and indeed, there already has been a good deal of speculation about it.

Despite the manifold criticisms of CIA, the intelligence agency under Admiral Hillenkoetter's leadership has shown tremendous improvement over the disorganized agglomerate it was when he took it over three years ago. It undeniably has gained stature among Government agencies, and it seems to have evolved some sense of purpose. On the other side of the ledger, however, it also has become something of a haven for malcontents, overdeveloped specialists and petty dabblers in policy. The channels through which it transmits vital information to Government executives who must act on that information have often been impossibly cumbersome. Moreover, Admiral Hillenkoetter is reported to have developed an "on the bridge" complex, maintaining an aloofness and relying principally on military confreres he has brought into the organization.

Aside from the uncertain tenure, this last point is perhaps the worst disadvantage of placing a military man in such a post. His closest friends, the persons he trusts most, are other military men, and naturally he gravitates toward them. Yet the Central Intelligence Agency is not a military operation; it is the warning system for the Government of the United States, and it ought to be staffed with the best experts from every walk of life.

That is why we hope that the President this time will bend every effort to find a qualified civilian for the directorship. The requirement for a civilian director ought not to be so rigid, of course, as to exclude a military man if he is obviously of superior background. But it is essential that the periodic disruption of CIA be ended, and that can best be done by appointing as its head a man who will make it a career without awaiting anxiously a return to some other pursuit.

Whoever is chosen, he ought to be a man with fluidity of mind who will concentrate on the all-important function of evaluation, who will straighten out reporting channels and avoid cries of "wolf," who will give CIA more cohesion than it now has and who at the same time can command the respect of the persons who will be reading his reports. This is a big order, but so is the job. There can be no second best intelligence agency at a time when any mistake might be the fatal one.

Soldier-Statesman

Gen. George C. Marshall spoke at the Arlington National Cemetery on Memorial Day more as a statesman than as a soldier. The emphasis of what he had to say was not on the force of arms but on the force of ideas. He has a profound faith in the validity and vitality of American principles—faith enough to be sure that they will prevail "in any contest of ideas." It is astonishing how little faith of this kind is to be found among those who prate most volubly about Americanism.

General Marshall pointedly opposed reorganizing the United Nations along the lines tentatively set forth by former President Herbert Hoover—that is to say, without the Soviet bloc. Imperfect though it may be, the U. N. remains, he said, "a forum where words can be used instead of bullets." So long as it stays open, "there are cracks in the Iron Curtain through which some of our ideas will penetrate." And if it provides a sounding board for Soviet propaganda, "we also have the privilege of telling our story through the same medium."

It is a mistake, he said, to think that all the ferment in the world is Communist-inspired. A large part represents an "upsurge of peoples who have long suffered in poverty and misrule . . . If we act with wisdom, we can guide this yearning to the better things of life through democratic channels. We must present democracy as holding within itself the seeds of unlimited progress for the human race." These pacific yet practical ideas from the lips of a great soldier will no doubt cause consternation in the camp of the wild men of Washington who think that tough talk is the only form of diplomacy. But to millions the world over they will bring hope of a return to reason.

Grain As A Wedge

Caution is a byword of these times, but even in a cautious view the newly expressed Russian willingness to consider a European grain agreement has interesting possibilities. The offer came shortly after Gunnar Myrdal, executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, returned from a visit to Moscow. Technically it was an answer to a proposal put forward last November by the ECE, which had reached a point of acute frustration in its efforts to reopen East-West trade. At the least, the Russian reply is a crumb of hope to keep the Economic Commission alive; at the most, it may be the first sign of a reversal of Russian tactics.

What is most significant about the Russian note, though it came long after this country had agreed to discuss the ECE proposal, is that it contains none of the usual propaganda tirade against the United States. It speaks of an agreement "safeguarding the interests of grain importers and exporters alike." This conciliatory tone is in marked contrast to the denunciations of the ECE proposal put forth by Poland and Czechoslovakia and the recent withdrawal of Poland from the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization, obviously at Russian instigation.

Whether or not Russia would have grain to export if her own people were adequately fed, she recently has furnished considerable quantities of wheat to Egypt and India as well as to Czechoslovakia. During discussions of the international wheat agreement last year, Russia professed anxiety to join but finally withdrew after other countries declined to grant her an export quota far larger than the historical record warranted. The trouble is that while she always has been eager to obtain Western grain production statistics, she has never made her own available. If the present proposal should materialize, care would have to be taken to avoid impinging on the existing wheat agreement. The ECE suggestion, however, would cover coarse grains such as corn, oats and barley as well as bread grains. And, whatever the Russian motives, the countries of western Europe are in a better bargaining position than previously because their need for grain imports has lessened.

In any case, the favorable Russian reply opens a niche in the Iron Curtain that ought to be explored by the United States and other Western members of the ECE. There need be no false optimism, but neither is there reason for premature cynicism. The proposal is at least worth talking about as a means of getting away from the fixed and rigid concepts that have developed regarding the cold war.

"Squeeze On Hospitals"

On behalf of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area representing the eight voluntary general hospitals with whom the District Government has contracted for hospital care of the legally indigent of the District, I wish to thank The Washington Post for bringing to the attention of both Congress and the public the facts upon which that contractual relationship is based.

Despite the fact that those facts were clearly stated in public hearings before both the District Commissioners and the District Subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations, the action of the House Committee in slashing the appropriation, on the grounds that the requested sum would constitute "a subsidy of private hospitals," clearly indicates that the committee did not understand the situation which your paper has so ably clarified in both its news and editorial columns.

Your May 25 editorial we particularly appreciate for three reasons. It points out the discrepancy between the contract rates as compared to actual costs at Gallinger and the voluntary hospitals. It draws the important distinction between the legally indigent and the medically indigent. And it requests that the Senate take that action which fair play clearly dictates.

"Tydingsism"

"A Citizen," in his letter of May 24, lashes out at "McCarthyism," which he describes as breeding disunity, creating distrust of our stability and morale and impairing our national security. I call attention to an even more serious breeder of disunity and menace to our security, "Tydingsism."

"Tydingsism" can best be described as a kind of timorous, shrinking state of mind, which shies away from any course of purposeful action in fear of what it might reveal. This fear in the present instance is compounded by the circumstance of a "not guilty" verdict rendered prior to final disposition of the matter being considered. Where "McCarthyism" strides in hobnailed boots "Tydingsism" tiptoes in tennis sneakers.

There is no fallacy, as "A Citizen" claims, in the use of the congressional committee system to study a subject like communism in Government. The committee system will work wherever there is a desire to make it work. Witness the manner in which the Kefauver crime investigation committee is going at its job. What a contrast to the Tydings Committee performance with its practically non-existent staff, its inability or unwillingness to conduct a searching cross-examination of all witnesses, its game of battledore and shuttlecock over the files, and now the latest, the chairman's statement that he has other more important things to do.

With the Hiss case, the Wadleigh confession and the highly questionable procedures of the Amerasia case, now coming to light, not many people will be likely to agree with "A Citizen's" claim that the fire, if there is any behind this smoke, is coming from "a bonfire of dead leaves." Put along side the known Communist espionage successes, as revealed in the Klaus Fuchs confession, with his United States contact recently named, there is little wonder that the whole sordid business is creating disunity and distrust. Facts, all the facts, nothing but the facts and such action as may be appropriate to the facts, will alone serve to dispel such feelings.

Superpatriots

Regrettably we do not get your paper here and the news of your famous editorial on the present political atmosphere ("The Road Back to America," May 22) only reached us over the radio. However, we heard enough about it to become vitally interested.

Unlike the current criticism that the State Department is a sort of nest for radical and pro-Communist views, our Provincetown Breakfast Club's criticism of the Department of State is that it has kept us in ignorance as far as real Communist activities are concerned.

As citizens of our country, we naturally want to know the conditions in other countries with whom we have things to settle. We want information and not confirmation of some pet prejudices. We want to know, for example, who were or are the anti-Communists in the State Department that mislaid the USSR application for a six-billion-dollar loan, a loan which if handled with dignity would have saved us the best part of the 14 billion dollars now being spent on anti-Soviet arming.

We want to know who are the anti-Communists in the State Department that seem to have access to private files and data to give to men like McCarthy. In other words, we see the greatest danger to our country in these "superpatriots" who under the guise of intense nationalism, actually expose us to a war with Russia, a needless war, from every possible aspect.

JOHN W. ALLEN,
Chairman, Provincetown (Mass.) Breakfast Club

Transit Safety

In view of the appalling tragedy which occurred in Chicago recently when a number of helpless victims were unable to escape from a burning street car because the doors of the car jammed, I think immediate steps should be taken here in our city for a thorough inspection of doors and windows in street cars and buses, particularly buses.

I know, from personal experience, in riding crowded J-1 and J-6, Takoma Park buses, that some of the side doors cannot be opened by the driver and he has had to request passengers making an exit to push through the crowded bus to leave by the front door. This has happened a number of times during the rush hour. Frequently, the windows in the buses are jammed and cannot be opened, even by strong-armed men. In a couple of buses, I noticed that the metal handles were totally missing from the bottom of the windows which, of course, made it impossible for them to be opened.

I shudder to think of what would happen if one of these defectively equipped buses collided with an oil truck or any other heavy vehicle.

Ex-Communists

Columnist Marquis Childs in his May 26 column, asserts that those persons and groups who are the most bitter foes of communism actually want a shooting war with Russia. In this class he lists displaced persons and exiles who have lost their homelands to the Communists; certain military men; and ex-Communists.

This is vicious reasoning and a pernicious over-simplification of the entire issue. The persons and groups he lists may be the most vociferous in their opposition to communism but to ascribe to them the title of fatalists and warmongers is unwarranted. I maintain that a man can be a bitter enemy of communism and a lover of peace at the same time. This Mr. Childs seems to deny.

On Tolerance

For the past several months, I have sponsored a contest on different problems for Connecticut high school students. Originally, the prize for the winner of each contest was a trip to Washington. But then, I ran into the problem of segregation here in the Nation's Capital. That is why the subject of the last contest was "Tolerance," and why the prize had to be a set of the Encyclopedia Britannica. I believe that you will agree that the winning letter (below) is an amazing one.

WILLIAM BENTON.
Senator from Connecticut.

"My name is Stephen Schneck; I'm 17 and a student at Cheshire Academy. After reading those 13 words, just what do you know about me? Can you say that I'm dishonest, miserly, a loud-mouth? In my mind, there is no one foolish enough to make these assumptions on the basis of the information I have given you.

"Now let me add four more words: I am a Jew. Many will feel now that I have given enough data to certify to all these qualities—and more.

"When you read the next few lines, please understand that I am not making a plea. Nor am I making an assumption. I am stating a fact.

"My race is not—any more than are Negroes, Protestants, Catholics or Chinamen—cast from the same die. Some men are good, some men are bad, some are a mixture of both. Notice, I say men, not races. Whether he worships Christ, Jehovah, Buddha or a stone, he is first a man. He breathes like you, reproduces like you, and if you beat him hard enough, he will die, just like you would. Throw him into the sun for a few thousand years, and he turns black. Keep him in the shade, and he's pale. Still and all, he's a member of the species known as homo sapiens, of the vertebrate class and the primate order. Can you get away from that?

"Don't ever say, 'He's the wrong sort of person,' or hate a man because he dips his fingers into water before he prays, wears a skull cap, or is your darker brother. There are no sorts, types or breeds. There is only the individual.

"Mr. Senator, please tell your friends that when they're judged, He won't take us by categories. It'll be alphabetically — with Abraham first and Zacapopolis last. Smith and Cohn and Jackson will be standing together. And when their names are read off, they'd better have a better excuse than 'I was a white man.'

"The Lord God, I'm afraid, is going to look down and answer, 'So what?' If we're going to be judged as we've judged others, then a great many people are going to get the book thrown at them. The gates of Heaven are going to open a lot faster to him who can shout, 'I was a good man.'"

New Concepts Of Children

By Malvina Lindsay

'Healthy Robot' Wane

IN 41 YEARS, or even in 10, much change can come in national thinking. Recently Dr. Henry F. Helmholz, chief consultant to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, checked back to find what primarily concerned delegates attending the four previous White House Conferences.

A graph of his survey would give an encouraging picture of the American mind. It would show that as a democratic people we have advanced through both the charity handout and the healthy robot phases of our attitudes toward children. It would show us steadily progressing in our scientific thinking about children, in our social responsibility for them, and in our respect for their individual dignity.

Our remote descendants may wonder why it took us until 1950 to make the child's mental and emotional development the theme of a White House Conference. Yet we at least are trailing along with the movement of all knowledge from matter into consciousness.

It is a long reach in public concern for the child from 1909 to 1950. The first White House Children's Conference was devoted chiefly to the needs of the Nation's neglected and dependent children. It's chief fruit was the founding of the Children's Bureau in 1912.

TEN YEARS later, in 1919, maternal and child health was the chief theme of a conference. This ushered in the 1920s era of "correct" baby feeding, with attendant emphasis on spinach and cod liver oil. And two years after this conference, the Sheppard-Towner Act gave a boost to physical welfare of children through grants-in-aid to States to help carry on materpal and child health clinics.

The big 1930 conference was planned as a pooling of all the Nation's "vast" information on the development of children. President Hoover in an opening speech mentioned that mental, emotional and spiritual development should also be considered along with the physical, but there was no follow-up on the suggestion. The conference got bogged down in depression economics and politics, growing out of the more immediate problem of needy children's dads in breadlines.

By 1940 people were beginning to realize that the healthy robot, on whose production Hitler had been specializing, could not be the chief goal of a democratic country. Hence this conference had as its theme the child and democracy—the duties of each to the other. But shortly after it met the country became involved in a war economy with more tangible and immediate child problems to be met.

Now at midcentury the planning for the conference to be held in December comes at a time when the 50 million children and young people in the country are having the best physical care in the country's history. Most have had drops put in their eyes at birth to prevent blindness, many have been fed according to Hoyle, been immunized against the communicable diseases of childhood.

BUT—what kind of adults will they become? Will they be part of what the conference planners call "human erosion"? Will they become the suspicious, frightened, angry people who cause so much trouble in the world for themselves and others? Or will they be the "lost" people, born with talents that are never put to productive use?

How prevent this human erosion by building healthy personalities as well as bodies? This will be one of the main questions the conference will explore. There could be no better timing for such effort. For the country is bursting at the seams with small children. There are 50 percent more children under 5 today than in 1940. And the early years are the most impressionable for emotional training.

The growth of democratic processes in this country also is shown in the planning for the 1950 conference. Young people are being given a chance to study their own problems, say what they think should be done about them.

What will come from this conference? Most of the others have produced tangible results, as well as having given impetus to general trends and movements in child welfare. One development could well be greater research, both governmental and privately sponsored, to get at the root of what is needed to help parents meet the psychological dilemmas for which they are increasingly asking aid.

"Radio In Review"

I want to express my appreciation for your new column "Radio in Review." It has been my opinion for a long time that radio fare should be treated critically, just as theater and film are, and not just presented in log form.

Especially gratifying it is to see John Crosby in print more than once a week. His viewpoint helps one remember the great potential for entertainment of a high order and all the cultural values that are inherent in the radio medium but remain so far from fully realized.

But mainly because radio in the United States today has an incalculable opinion-forming function, The Washington Post is to be congratulated for publishing a daily critical column concerning programming and what goes on in the industry.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Damnable Obsession

GENERAL MARSHALL, speaking in Arlington Cemetery, found it necessary to warn the country against the "surrender" of any "part of our leadership in the fight for peace." He used these words in replying specifically to Mr. Hoover's proposal to break up the United Nations. But he was thinking of something much bigger than that. The theme of this exalted and faithful address was that we are failing to provide leadership to mankind in the fight for peace.

Lippmann

HAVING said that, of course, we must remain well armed and that we must use our economic power constructively, General Marshall warned the country that "we should not place complete dependence on military and material power." The word complete was not, I think, carelessly and accidentally used. For no one who has been a close observer of things in Washington can fail to feel that for a variety of reasons, some of them objective, some psychological, some personal, some partisan and political, the Administration's foreign policy has during the past year created the impression here and abroad that it places virtually complete dependence on military and material power.

This impression may or may not reflect the real views of Mr. Truman and of Mr. Acheson. But that this impression has been created and that it has spread around the world is certain. It is reflected at home in the defeatism shown in the Gallup Poll, which finds a majority of the people expecting war within five years. It is reflected abroad in a drastic decline of American popularity among the broad masses of the people. This country has hardly begun to realize the extent and the depth of the loss of confidence in our wisdom, and even in our motives.

WE HAVE allowed ourselves to become identified with the idea that war is inevitable, and that our whole foreign policy is determined by the strategic necessities of the United States. As long as that is the picture of ourselves which we permit mankind to regard as the true picture, no money we appropriate for armaments and no contributions we make to recovery can arrest the breakdown of American influence abroad. "War," said General Marshall, "is no longer just an evil. In this age it seems intolerable." The plain fact is that we have allowed the Soviet propaganda to associate us with the intolerable evil of war. Indeed we have helped the Soviet propaganda by all kinds of incendiary utterances from the Pentagon, from the State Department, from various foreign missions abroad, in Congress, and in inspired radio and press commentaries.

We have played right into the hands of the Soviet propaganda by explaining that everything we do, every decision we take, is based on a strategical calculation about war. This damnable obsession has gotten to the point where we can hardly send milk to babies abroad without explaining that this is an important action in our cold war with Russian communism.

THE OFFICIAL theory of peace has been that it can be preserved if the Atlantic community is united and strong. Until it is stronger and more united than it is now, we must not talk about peace. We must not let the Russians think we wish to negotiate. For that will only make them think that we are weak. We must not let our own people think about negotiation. That will only make them soft and unwilling to vote the money, to create the armies, and to face the sacrifices which are necessary to make us strong. We must concentrate our whole attention and effort on strengthening and uniting the Atlantic community — and then, eventually, we shall "extend the area of possible agreement."

This theory is, I venture to believe, almost but not altogether sound and true. It is more than a mere half-truth. It is decidedly less, however, than the sufficient truth.

THE DEFECT of the theory is that you cannot unite—and keep united—the Atlantic community unless you can convince the exposed nations of continental Europe that you are organizing peace. If you treat the Atlantic community as a military coalition for war, or allow the impression to exist that that is what you are doing, you will not, in my opinion, be able to unite the Atlantic community. For there are many countries in the Atlantic community that cannot surely be defended in case of war. There are some which cannot be defended at all. They cannot be intimately associated with the Atlantic community unless they believe that in that association war can be prevented. The more probable that war appears to be, the stronger the tendency of the undefendable countries to break away from the Atlantic alliance.

Therefore, it is safe to predict that no matter what the agreements reached by the governments in London, the unity and strength of the Atlantic alliance will decline, not increase, unless the Administration succeeds in identifying itself, once more, with the probability and with the hope of peace.

Acheson's Report

By Marquis Childs

American Strength Spread Thin

MEASURED against the background of the handicaps piled on him before he left for the conferences in Paris and in London, Secretary Acheson's report to Congress is a sober record of impressive achievement. It is an account of the development of Atlantic organization from a group of committees on a paper chart to an actuality.

Childs

On both sides of the fence the critical voices are already being raised. There are those who say that this is only half enough—a faltering step forward instead of the bold frontal approach essential to make the defenses of western Europe a reality within 12 to 18 months.

On the other hand are the isolationists of the old school who see in the Atlantic organization an iron-clad commitment to take America into war. Their voices will be raised loud and long in the debate in the Senate over President Truman's request for a new appropriation for foreign arms aid. It is reported that that request will be for $1,225,000,000 for 14 countries, including 9 within the Atlantic Pact framework and 5—Greece, Turkey, Iran, Korea and the Philippines—outside it.

When one considers the extraordinary range of geography to be covered, and the threat of communism, breakdown and chaos in those far-flung areas, then the amount to be asked in arms assistance seems almost pitifully small. It is just here, in my opinion, that the chief weakness of the policy of strength through containment is apparent.

IF THE Atlantic community were a separate and untouchable entity, existing on an island whole and complete, then the progress toward federation in Acheson's report would have more significance. But it is in the inter-relationships of the Atlantic Pact countries with the rest of the world that the threat to security and peace exists. And it is in the ever-widening circle of these relationships that American strength is spread thinner and thinner.

The future may show that the most fateful decision taken by Acheson on his European mission was given only a glancing mention in his prepared report to Congress. That is the decision announced in Paris on May 8 that the United States intended to give both military and economic assistance to the regime of Bao Dai who is supported by the French in Indo-China.

The French army of 150,000 in Indo-China is extremely hard-pressed by the guerillas operating under the direction of the Moscow-trained Communist Ho Chi-minh. Obtaining replacements for this army in France is reported to be difficult to the point of impossibility. Thus it is hard to see any limit on the scope of this aid if it is to be effective in putting down the revolt and restoring order.

Furthermore, our friends in southeast Asia, particularly in India, believe that we have made a political as well as a strategic error. They say that Bao Dai can never be considered anything but a puppet of the French and that therefore he cannot rally the people of Indo-China in any effective resistance to a mass revolt. Consequently they prophesy that the end will be another China—that is defeat for the United States after a costly and futile expenditure of arms and economic assistance.

INTERVENTION in Indo-China must also be considered in the larger setting of a divided world. The Soviet Union has recognized Ho Chi-minh and his forces as the government of Indo-China. For reasons of prestige and practicality in relation to the Communist advance in southeast Asia, Russia will be likely now to put all possible support behind the guerilla leader. In this way the two major powers can be drawn into at least an undeclared war on a battlefield on which most of the disadvantages will be ours.

This, it will be said, is the counsel of timidity. Obviously, it was necessary to do something in Indo-China, and quickly. That was the loud chorus of advice from the critics in and out of Congress who harped on the dangers of another Chinese debacle.

But the direct approach, embracing Bao Dai, ignores the possibility of using the United Nations as intermediary. Through the U. N. it might have been possible to enlist such a peacemaker as Prime Minister Pandit Nehru of India, who is keenly aware of the implications of the step America has now taken in Indo-China. Nehru also understands far better than any Westerner possibly can the nature of the aspirations of peoples who have lived so long under colonialism.

As Acheson pointed out with the candor that is one of his chief characteristics, almost everything depends now on what Congress does to implement the decisions taken in London. The question is how far and how fast. On the map the Secretary has put before them there are no limits.

Congressional Questions Pop As Acheson Faces Members

been asked for "publicity" than for information, but he, too, thought the experiment worth while.

Some older members expressed the hope that future questioning of Cabinet members might take place in the House chamber, at a time when the House was not in session, so that they would not have to walk across to the Library.

Perhaps because of the novelty of the occasion, the Library auditorium was almost filled when Acheson began reading his report. Vice President Barkley was sitting in the front row as a spectator, as if to emphasize that this was not a formal session of the two Houses.

To show that it was a bipartisan occasion, floor leaders of both parties sat with Acheson on the stage, framed with potted palms and ferns. To Acheson's right were the Senate floor leaders, Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) and Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.); to his left were John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), the House majority leader, and Leslie Arends (R., Ill.), the Republican whip. McCormack acted as master of ceremonies, recognizing questioners as they called out "Mr. Chairman!"

First on his feet was Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), who wanted to know whether the United States was framing any "over-all proposals" for reducing armaments and controlling atomic energy. No, we have no new proposals, Acheson answered; both subjects were under discussion at the United Nations until the Soviet representatives walked out.

Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.) was next. "How will it be possible to achieve a balanced collective defense force in Europe," he asked, "if we don't include Turkey and Spain?"

Acheson said the inclusion of other countries was a question wholly separate from the principle of an integrated defense. The principle, he said, meant that each country must do what it can do best for the common good; it might promote collective defense to bring in other countries, but he wouldn't be definite.

Representative Robert L. Sikes (D., Fla.) was recognized. "How vigorously," he asked, "is the State Department prepared to back the Schuman Plan for the pooling of French and German industries, in view of what appears to be British opposition?"

This was an easy one for Acheson. He replied briskly that he had endorsed the Schuman idea, President Truman had approved it warmly, the United States had taken a very strong position in support of it.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), asked politely whether any new understanding had been reached at London on the admission of Communist China to the United Nations. No, Acheson answered, there was no understanding on the subject.

Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.) wanted to know whether the Big Three ministers had agreed on any plan to ease unemployment among the Germans expelled from eastern Europe. Yes, Acheson answered; instructions were issued to the Allied High Commissioners in Germany which he hoped would have an effect on this problem.

The next questioner was Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.), a tireless economizer on all foreign aid measures. He wondered why Acheson hadn't asked the Secretary General of the U. N., to call a disarmament conference of 59 countries "rather than build this great war machine."

Acheson explained that the United States had been trying for two or three years to get agreement on the limitation of armaments, but without success. The Soviet Union had been strengthening its armaments, he said; this presented the world with a very dangerous situation.

As I have pointed out again and again, sad the Secretary the whole purpose of what we are doing has been to preserve peace. And at this his audience applauded, for the first time in the question period.

The first flare-up came when Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) asked why Acheson didn't put his "total diplomacy" to work to prevent the ejection of the Nationalist China from the U. N. Acheson smiled sadly; he said he and Judd had debated this issue repeatedly, and he himself had stated his position at least a thousand times, but he would do it once more.

He said the question of admitting Communist China was not one on which the United States would use its veto in the Security Council; hence the decision would depend on a majority vote. In other words, Judd retorted, this implies "that we will maintain our superior rectitude but the other people will win the battle."

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) asked Acheson "What is your appraisal of the conference between Trygve Lie and Stalin?" The Secretary said he couldn't say more than Lie himself had said, since Lie had asked for the interview with Stalin. But, said Acheson: it was important that Lie had said he was not the bearer of a message. As for Lie's idea of a periodic meeting of the Security Council, Acheson went on, there could be no such meetings until the issue of Chinese representation was settled and the Russians stopped their boycott.

Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) wanted to know the prospects of bringing "a united Germany" to the side of the Western democracies. Acheson's answer was that the chance of getting a united Germany did not depend on the West, but on the Russians, who had been moving steadily forward since 1943 to Sovietize all of eastern Europe, including eastern Germany.

Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.) seemed to get on Acheson's nerves by asking for comment on the so-called Atlantic Union plan and on the admission of Spain to the Marshall Plan organization. Acheson coldly replied he had no comment on either.

Representative M. G. Burnside (D., W. Va.) asked whether the economy of Japan could be dovetailed with that of southeast Asia. Acheson found this a hard one to answer off-hand; he thought it would not be easy but he believed it possible, and his department was giving serious thought to the problem.

Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) of the Un-American Affairs Committee demanded to know why the Western nations had let themselves be "represented" in talks with Stalin by Trygve Lie, "a known Communist." Acheson answered that no one had ever thought of Lie as representing anybody but himself. And he brushed off Rankin's "Communist" charge by saying: That's your statement.

Finally, after 25 minutes of questions, McCormack said there would be time for one more. It came from Representative H. R. Gross (R., Iowa) who asked whether the State Department believed in helping dictators. Acheson was bewildered until Gross made his question specific.

"Did the State Department support the recent loan to Dictator Peron of Argentina?" Gross persisted. Certainly, Acheson answered; but by this time the audience was streaming toward the exits.

The Secretary mopped his brow and went home to change his shirt. He had been sizzling under the Klieg lights for an hour, and his clothes were wringing wet.

It had not been the best question-and-answer session in his experience, but he was satisfied. And most legislators thought that, on balance, the "informal joint session" had been a good idea.

fense and at the same time to get ahead with the constructive task of building a successfully functioning economy in the free world."

The Secretary assured Congress that none of the foreign ministers at London had said anything indicating "that there is any immediate threat of war."

"It was our unanimous view that this is not the problem," he said. "The problem is to meet a threat which, in view of the known program of the Kremlin, will exist unless we act now to prepare our defenses against aggression.

Common Purpose Peaceful

"It was made unmistakably clear in all our discussions that our common purpose in preparing our common defense is a peaceful one. We hope never to need them.

"But so long as any dictatorship builds powerful armed forces, so long must democracies, if they are to be left in peace, evidence their determination to defend themselves by maintaining adequate forces in being and an adequate state of preparedness."

The legislators of both parties, who had given Acheson a standing ovation when he started, applauded at this point for the first and only time during his half-hour speech.

Although he had much to say about defense, his accent throughout was on peace as the only goal of North Atlantic foreign policy. The Soviet Union, he said, had delayed the fulfillment of peace in the United Nations, but the non-Soviet nations were pushing ahead toward the same goal in other ways.

Acheson gave a glowing account of his talks, first with the British and French foreign ministers and then with the 11 foreign ministers who met with him in the North Atlantic Council. He found the North Atlantic community "emerging as a political reality of the utmost importance."

He also reported "a new vigor in European life and leadership," shown especially by the proposal of Foreign Minister Schuman of France for pooling French and German coal and steel industries. He described the Schuman proposal as "a momentous and courageous act," and predicted it would "open the door to a new era in Europe" if its details were developed so as to expand Europe's economy.

The Secretary reviewed other decisions taken in London on Germany, Austria, Indo-China and the Middle East, and on linking the United States and Canada more closely to the Marshall Plan organization in western Europe. "The most dramatic fact that could be reported," he said, was that the Atlantic nations reached a basic understanding of their objectives, "of the dangers and threats which confront us, and of the requirements for action."

"Most of what was done," he said, "was a beginning of still further progress . . . The Atlantic community is on the right road, we have gone some distance down it, and we know where we are going . . .

"How far and how fast we go depends on each country, but perhaps especially on the United States . . .

"Individually, no one of these countries, including the United States, has the strength, even if it had the desire, to determine the course of the future.

"Together, this community has the human and material resources, the skills, the initiative, the tradition and the devotion of free men, and a dynamic idea which can give us confidence that the future belongs to freedom.

"In our unity there is strength. And in our strength is the foundation of peace."

McCone Gets Bid to Staff Of Air Force

John A. McCone, Los Angeles business man and a Republican, was nominated yesterday by President Truman to be Undersecretary of the Air Force.

As forecast weeks ago in The Washington Post, McCone was the personal selection of new Air Force Secretary Thomas K. Finletter. Longtime friends, McCone served with Finletter on the President's Air Policy Commission in 1947.

Their report, called "Survival in the Air Age," proposed creation of a 70-group Air Force to meet the threat of a Soviet atomic attack by the early 1950s. Finletter headed the commission.

At the same time, Earl D. Johnson, recently confirmed as Assistant Secretary of the Army, was sworn into that post in a Pentagon ceremony. The Greenwich, Conn., business man served with the Air Transport Command during the war.

A native of San Francisco, McCone, 48, was graduated from the University of California in 1922. He was construction superintendent of the Llewellyn Iron Works in the '20s and later was vice president of Consolidated Steel Corp.

Know-How, Not Labor Held Key to Output

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

Under terms of the UAW's new contract with General Motors, the Auto Workers will get five annual increases of 4 cents an hour, described by the union as a reward for increasing productivity.

This is perhaps the most important provision in a remarkable contract. It assumes that productivity will rise during the next five years. But the idea that labor should be "rewarded" for the rise shows that this whole concept is still muddled in the public mind.

Productivity is usually measured in output per man-hour, whether of steel ingots, men's shoes or passenger cars. A composite index measures productivity for all industries. If it now takes fewer hours of work than it did 10 years ago to make a Chevrolet, we say that productivity has risen in the Chevrolet plants.

But why does it rise? The chief answer is to be found in our increasing technical knowledge: new machines, better handling of materials, less waste motion. Better labor effort could play a part, but need not. In fact, an employer whose workers are slow and inefficient may install labor-saving machines and raise productivity, even with declining labor effort.

American productivity has given us our ever-expanding standard of living. This is not to be measured merely in automobiles, television sets and home freezers, but in greater leisure, longer education for our children and retirement for our old people.

Each year, as it cost us less human labor to make the things we want, our workers benefited in higher wages, our employers in higher returns, our people in a rising standard of living. If we are to reach President Truman's goal of 300 billion dollars a year in national income, our productivity must continue to rise.

Does it always do so? Can we assume—as the GM contract does—that it necessarily will in the future?

Figures for manufacturing show that productivity rose an average of 3 percent a year from 1909 to 1939. We have come to take this automatic progress for granted, like the rising of the sun.

But economists are now studying the figures for the war and reconversion periods, and there is evidence that during the eight years of 1939 to 1947 our productivity actually came to a standstill. Rayon, railroad transportation and steel made good progress, but in other fields the decline was disastrous: man-hour output dropped 31 percent in lead and zinc mining, 21 percent in malt liquors, and 16 percent in both radio home receivers and meat packing.

Does this mean we are at a turning point? We cannot be sure. During the war there was good reason for productivity to slip. Industrial machinery wore out and could not be replaced; experienced workers were drafted; there were severe materials shortages. During reconversion the same troubles continued to plague us.

Only when we have had time to study the figures for 1949 and 1950 will we know whether American productivity has resumed its historic upward trend.

The May issue of the Federal Reserve Bulletin thinks that 1949-50 showed a sharp upward spurt as new and efficient machines came into operation. It also makes a startling suggestion: that rising productivity influenced unemployment by permitting production to increase without a comparable increase in the number at work.

It seems highly unlikely that productivity caused unemployment. It seems more likely that high labor costs led business men to lay off marginal workers and install labor-saving machines. In fact, without rising productivity, unemployment might have been worse.

The notion that increasing productivity causes long-run unemployment will not stand up to the facts. From 1909-1947, manufacturing productivity rose 150 percent. By such reasoning, employment in manufacturing should have dropped by 60 percent.

This is nonsense, of course. Technological unemployment does hit particular jobs at particular times. Cigar-making machinery put a lot of skilled cigar-makers out of work, and talking pictures were a calamity to many silent screen stars.

But over the long run, rising productivity has been shared by all of us. So long as incomes rise or prices fall to keep pace with the increasing output of goods, we are all better off. The main job now is to make sure that our output does increase.

Need a Buffalo? Uncle Sam Furnishes It, and Much Else

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Thomas Jefferson would turn over in his grave if he knew what the Federal Government is up to these days.

The exponent of small government never envisioned a volume like "Federal Services to Cities and Towns," issued recently by the American Municipal Association.

It is aimed at leading city officials "through the Federal labyrinth to the correct contacts" on particular problems.

Suppose, for instance, you are worried about the possibility of an earthquake. The AMA advises contacting the Coast and Geodetic Survey for "data on probability; information on motions."

Need a buffalo, deer or elk? The Fish and Wildlife Service, Interior Department, can send one over from Midwestern refuges at the cost of crating and shipping.

Here are some other unusual services of Uncle Samuel, surprising even to old hands around Washington:

Planning an air show? Advice and information available at the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

School losing its appeal? Bureau of Labor Standards, Labor Department, has advice on a "Back-to-School Drive" to encourage youths to get their diplomas before going to work.

Window cleaners or labor foremen not up to par? Public Buildings Service, General Services Administration, has training manuals for them.

Need a good, cheap loan? Reconstruction Finance Corporation may lend cash at 3 percent for rehabilitation of public property damaged by catastrophes.

Short on doctors or dentists? Contact the Agriculture Department Extension Service for assistance in enticing some to your community.

Streets washing away? The Soil Conservation Service, Agriculture Department, may save the day. Contact it.

Good at swapping? The Bureau of Land Management in the Interior Department makes swaps of public land "for municipal property of equal value." The unit can also arrange for digging out clay, yucca, manzanita and cactus from public tracts, if the town is running short.

But the Federal service in line for the biggest business is described thus:

"Receives complaints about unduly burdensome Federal forms or questionnaires, or unauthorized forms or questionnaires. Bureau of the Budget."

Dewey Estate Goes to One Son; Others Cut Off

Commander Theodore Gibbs Dewey left an estate of $100,899 to one of his two sons and cut the other off with $1, it was learned yesterday. Commander Dewey was the nephew of Admiral George Dewey, the Spanish-American War hero.

A petition for probate of the will of Commander Dewey was filed in District Court and listed real estate as valued at $90,900, and personal property at $10,000.

Under terms of his will dated 1936, Commander Dewey cut off one son, Navy Capt. Theodore Macrae Dewey, of Chevy Chase, with $1. Commander Dewey's will said the meager sum was bequeathed because of Theodore's "unfilial conduct and because of sums of money given him by me from early manhood."

The rest of the estate was given to his other son, Edward B. Dewey, who lived with his father at 2500 Massachusetts ave. nw. for many years. This son, Commander Dewey termed my "dutiful son." In addition to the property, the commander gave Edward Dewey "my undying blessings for his kindness and love to his mother and me from early childhood."

In another court action yesterday, Edward Dewey filed suit against the National Life Insurance Co. of Vermont. He claims that since 1890, his father had a $10,000 policy with the company and named him beneficiary. Despite demands, the money has not been paid, according to the suit.

Commander Dewey died here at the age of 91 on March 18. His wife, Maria Bradley Dewey, died in 1924.

Robert Hermany, an Interstate Commerce Commission auditor who died here May 16, left virtually all of his $100,000 estate to Jacob's Union Church in Jacksonville, Pa., it was learned yesterday.

Mr. Hermany, who resided at 3117 Hawthorne st. nw., died on May 16. His will was filed for probate in District Court.

The only bequests other than to the church are for small sums to relatives and friends.

According to his attorney, Oscar See, Hermany came from an old farm family in Pennsylvania and went to the Jacob's Church in early manhood.

Refrigerator Starts Fire; Four Rescued

Firemen rescued four persons early yesterday from a smoke-and-fume-filled house at 1835 Hamlin se. ne.

Damage was confined to the kitchen of the house, where the blaze is believed to have started from a short circuit in the refrigerator. There was no estimate of loss.

Firemen assisted the owner of the home, Mrs. Maude Harman, 62, down the steps after slipping a gas mask over her face to protect her from fumes. She was treated on the scene from smoke inhalation and shock.

Using ladders, firemen rescued Norman Joseph, 35, and Donald C. McNeill, 65, roomers, and Mrs. Mildred Norris, 38, of 4211 28th st., Mount Rainier, who was visiting.

The fire was reported at 2:14 a.m.

A half hiur earlier, Alexander N. Gonzalez, 24, suffered burns of the hands while trying to extinguish a blaze in a davenport in his third floor apartment at 1647 Lamont st. nw.

If you have tried a lot of things and still cough, wheeze and can't sleep or breathe well, because of recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, you can't know what ease and breathing comfort may be yours until you try MENDACO. This great medicine is not a smoke, injection or spray, but works through the blood, thus reaching the lungs and bronchial tubes. Usually the first dose starts helping nature immediately 3 ways: 1. Helps loosen and remove thick strangling mucus. 2. Thus promotes freer breathing and sounder, more refreshing sleep. 3. Helps alleviate coughing, wheezing, sneezing. Get Mendaco from your druggist.

Gas Company's New Pfd. Stock Offered at $103

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. last night announced a subscription price of $103 a share for the offering of 30,600 new shares of preferred stock.

Common shareholders of record May 31 were mailed rights entitling them to buy one share of the new $4.25 preferred stock for each 20 common shares. The subscription period will expire at 3 p. m. on June 13, after which any unsubscribed stock will be offered to the public by an underwriting group headed by Johnston, Lemon & Co.

The formal offering will be made today, following clearance by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Public Utilities Commission.

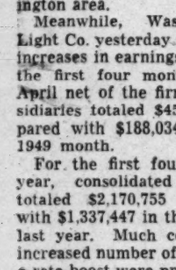
Proceeds from the sale, expected to exceed three million dollars, will be used by the gas company to finance main extensions and other facilities to serve new gas customers in the Metropolitan Washington area.

Meanwhile, Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported sharp increases in earnings for April and the first four months this year. April net of the firm and its subsidiaries totaled $451,741 as compared with $188,034 in the same 1949 month.

For the first four months this year, consolidated net income totaled $2,170,755 as compared with $1,337,447 in the same period last year. Much colder weather, increased number of customers and a rate boost were principal factors.

OFFERING: A syndicate headed by National City Bank of New York is reoffering 25 million dollars of Maryland school and general construction bonds at prices to yield from 0.95 percent for 1965 maturities. The award was made on bid of 100.9128 for a 1⅞ percent coupon and produced a net interest cost to Maryland of 1.4030. Another syndicate, headed by Harris Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, named a net interest cost of 1.3968 percent for a combination of 1¼ and 1¼ percent coupons. This bid, lower than National City's was rejected by the State because it did not conform to the bidding invitations, which specified that all bonds of the offering should bear a similar coupon.

NEW PRESIDENT: O. W. Boswell of Paris, Tex., will assume presidency today of the National Savings and Loan League, succeeding John L. Conner of Atlanta, Ga. Other new officers, who will be installed at the league's annual convention today in Chicago, are: Earl C. Weber, Chicago, first vice president; Raleigh W. Greene, St. Petersburg, Fla., second vice president, and Alfred G. Peterson, Greenwich, Conn., secretary.



Boswell

SHIFT: Removal of its plant and main offices from Baltimore to 812 North Fairfax st., Alexandria, Va., was announced yesterday by the Dryomatic Corp. The reorganized firm will continue manufacture of dehumidifying units on an expanded production schedule.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: William J. Haley has been elected president of Esso Export Corp., succeeding Frank M. Balling. Harold W. Fisher has been appointed to succeed Haley as coordinator of refining operations of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) . . . W. Russell Briscoe, insurance broker, has been appointed to the executive council of the Federation for Railway Progress.

Haley

AIR REVENUES: The Air Transport Association predicted that the 16 domestic trunk airlines will show an operating profit in 1950 equal to that of 1949. The lines had net operating profits of about 25 million dollars in 1949, after showing an overall loss in 1948. The ATA said "total operating revenues may reach $501,600,000 as compared with $460,000,000 in 1949. With some further reduction anticipated in the unit expenses of operation, net operating profits should approximate 25 million dollars, or about the same as 1949."

STILL CLIMBING: Washington bank clearings in May totaled $387,722,017, a new high for the year and the largest total for that month in history. The five-month aggregate was $1,797,752,464, also a record and $261,003,726 higher than in the like 1949 period. Monthly clearings figures, as reported by George H. Bright, manager of the Washington Clearing House Association, follow:

January	$371,334,453	$296,546,165
February	301,844,868	283,991,625
March	376,127,107	334,414,023
April	360,724,018	300,751,165
May	387,722,017	321,045,759

ODD LOTS: Sears, Roebuck & Co. trimmed prices on more than 4000 items an average of 7 percent from those in its spring-and-summer general catalogue. The cuts are listed in the midsummer sale book distributed this week . . . The Equitable Life Assurance Society announced extension of its purchase-lease freight car plan to include Diesel locomotives . . . The Advertising Council announced a national campaign to promote public knowledge of the Hoover Commission report on Government reorganization.

New York Cotton

New York, May 31 (AP).—Cotton futures advanced into new seasonal high ground today on Board of Trade and commission House buying. Considerable short covering aided the upturn, which extended to $2.40 a bale before the market reacted partially on profit-taking and hedging. Final levels were 60 cents to $1.15 a bale above the previous close.

New Strawhat Spot Opens With 'Star'

By Richard L. Coe

IF YOU'VE NOT yet unplugged your electric blanket, be advised that summer is here anyway. The area's newest summer theater is open for business.

This is a casual, open air spot on the Mount Vernon Highway, about five miles below Alexandria at Collingwood. It's on the grounds of the tasty Collingwood Inn and the theater's at the bottom of a slope that leads down to the Potomac. The stage is covered; newly-built, it looks like the sawed-off end of a white barn. The seats—there soon will be about 400 of 'em—are former GI theater chairs, judging from the markings, and the general atmosphere is a combination of youthful enthusiasm and the wan laziness that open air breeds in human beings.

The play itself, this week, anyway, is not the thing. Preston Sturges' old hit, "Strictly Dishonorable," will continue through Sunday evening, with "Yes, My Darling Daughter" set as the second bill opening next Tuesday night.

Though Colonial Productions, Inc., as Henry Williamson, Thomas J. McNeil, Edmund Jordan and Robert D. Eckel call themselves, emphasizes that in the future there will be no stars, "Strictly Dishonorable" gives star billing to Gloria Jean, a name you may recall as one of the many successors to Deanna Durbin as a movie child of song.

Gloria has grown up now, about 17 she looks to be, with red hair and a developing figure. Unfortunately, Gloria's movie scenes don't help her much as a stage performer. She has yet to learn the first rudiments of projection and makes only a wan, embarrassed child of what should be a spicy maiden from the sticks who pushes a worldly opera tenor, well, pretty far.

The resident company, including Eugene Malo, Edmund Jordan and James Van Wart, come off better than Gloria in telling this story about a lass who turns in her smug sweetie from Jersey's Oranges for the been-around-some tenor.

On Dated Moments

Now that the parade of summer revivals is started, I wish directors would pay some attention to lines that don't fit their particular productions. At Collingwood, for instance, the tenor makes quite a thing of nearing paunchy middle age. Since the fellow who plays him is anything but, why not change the line? Summer revivals aren't sacred. Matter of fact, it would do "Strictly Dishonorable" some good to forget the whole speakeasy business. Why allow dated comedies to date themselves?

Collingwood's aim, as expressed by an opening night greeting from Tom McNeil, a young amiable New York tycoon, is to entertain modestly the rovers of northern Virginia. Modestly, he accurately said.

ANOTHER summer theater opened this week, Baltimore's Hilltop, strictly speaking at Lutherville . . . The play? . . . Good old "Private Lives," in which, this week at Passaic, N. J., Tallulah is winding up her three-year scamper.

K-B DISPATCH: They're adiggin' up at 17th and Columbia rd. on the K-B's next theater, the Ritz, which Prexy Fred Kogod hopes will be opening around Thanksgiving . . . And the MacArthur, now fully in the K-B chain, is adding matinees every Friday, Saturday, Sunday and holiday.

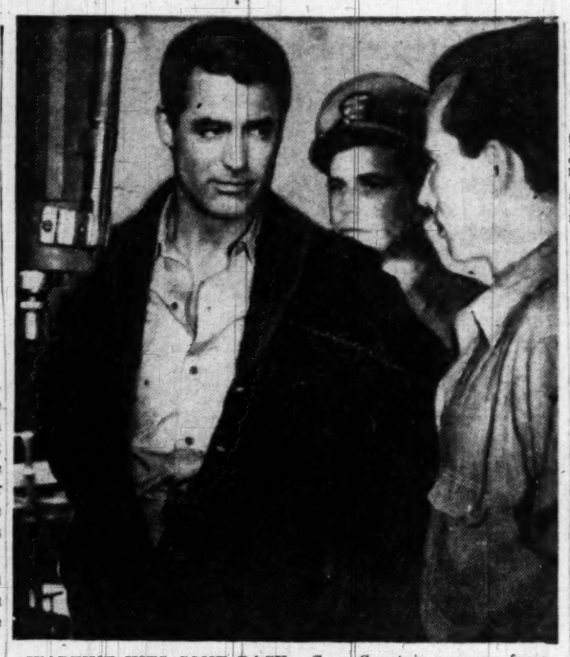
THE ARLINGTON Kiwanis Club is thumbing for no rain on Sunday night, when it will present an International Folk Festival at the Watergate, proceeds to go toward a permanent summer camp near Herndon for the Arlington YMCA . . . Up from Asheville, N. C., will come dancers from this country's oldest folk festival, as well as a covey of pretty Irish lassies to whirl and jig to the hornpipe . . . Others on the barge will be Pete Cassell, Connie B. Gay and Don Patton's mountaineer band.

COMDR. William J. Lederer some time back relieved himself mirthfully of a piece on housekeeping. "How to Keep House the Navy Way," he called it, and mere males chuckled happily for months . . . Now it's been made into a picture which Metro calls "The Skipper Surprised His Wife," and the Capitol will get it as a world premiere June 8 . . . Those Navy pals of Lederer who teased his wisdom into their own housekeepers will be joining a top-brass segment opening night for a look at Robert Walker and Joan Leslie in the leads.

THAT "BRIGADOON" team, Author Alan Jay Lerner and Composer Frederick Loewe, have completed a new musical, about the wild wild West, "Paint Your Wagon." . . . Rightly enough, Cheryl Crawford, who did so well by their Highland musical at the Gayety, will produce this new one in the fall.

THE UNITARIAN PLAYERS have readied another production for their Pierce Hall, where it will be played Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 . . . "Ring Around Elizabeth" is this comedy by Charlotte Armstrong, with John B. Wentworth directing . . . Pauline Leake, a Government economist during the day, but since her youth a lively amateur actress by night, has the feminine lead, with William Swayne her leading man . . . Others in the cast include Margaret Rallings, Emily Fandlay, William D. Ingram, Gloria Tomkins, Janice Weisblatt, Maxine Fillyaw, Mrs. Howard Hosmer and Harvey Thornton.

THE BROWNE Junior High School Faculty Players will act "George Washington Slept Here" tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 in the school auditorium . . . Raymond John Weir has been teaching their stage roles to such teachers as: Earl S. Alfred, Fred J. Aranha, Lawrence L. Baylor, Paul E. Brown, George A. Campbell, Howard N. Christian, James E. Goins, Grace R. Gwaltney, Lottie W. Hughes, Thelma H. Johnson, Helen M. Keyes, Lucy E. Mattingly, Charles E. Peters, Lillie M. Sawyer and Carolyn E. Welch.



WARTIME HITS COME BACK: Cary Grant in a scene from "Destination Tokyo," being revived today on the Warner screen, teamed on a double bill with "God Is My Co-Pilot." John Garfield costars with Grant in the former; Dennis Morgan tops the cast of Col. Robert Lee Scott's story

Union Charges Guard Violence In Enka Strike

Morristown, Tenn., May 31 (AP).—Union officials charged today that National Guardsmen are engaged in strike-breaking activities at the American Enka Corp. plant here.

They also accused Guardsmen, State highway patrolmen and the sheriff's office of violating civil rights of strikes and instigating a "reign of terror."

The charges were made at Nashville, Tenn., and Washington by spokesmen for the CIO Textile Workers of America, whose Local 1054 has been on strike since March 28.

The strike has been marked by repeated violence and arrests, but there was no trouble today as 250 National Guardsmen and numerous State Patrolmen remained on duty in the plant area. The troops moved in Monday after Sheriff Robert Medlin appealed to Gov. Gordon Browning for help.

The company announced at Asheville, N. C., today that at the suggestion of Governor Browning a meeting of Enka officials and strikers will be held in Atlanta Friday in an effort to settle the strike.

Attorney Robert S. Cahoon of the Atlanta office of the Textile Workers laid the strikers' complaints before Browning at Nashville.

Called "Flagrant Case"

In Washington Union Representative John W. Edelman wrote Attorney General McGrath there seldom has been "a more flagrant case of outright strikebreaking by State, county and local officials than what is taking place in Hamblen County right now." He added:

"The calling out of the National Guard was utterly without justification, except as a show of force to intimidate and terrorize workers engaged in a legal and justified strike. Instead of behaving like disciplined troops wearing the uniform of the United States, the Guardsmen have beaten up strikers and slugged unarmed people."

Brig. Gen. D. L. McReynolds, commanding officer of Guardsmen at the plant, denied the charges.

Cahoon told newsmen he and a Morristown union representative, Silas Switzer, were arrested by patrolmen and Guardsmen yesterday and held for hours in jail without bond after first being slugged by patrolmen and Guardsmen.

Shows Head Wounds

The attorney displayed a flesh wound in the cheek and battered lips he said were inflicted when a patrolman knocked him out with the butt end of a pistol. He said Switzer also was struck and that neither had offered any resistance.

Cahoon said the slugging occurred at a doctor's office where the two, under guard of the militiamen and patrolmen, had taken a striker for an X-ray examination.

He said the striker L. A. (Blackie) Warrick, had been bloodied by patrol blackjacks at the county jail after he and several others were placed under arrest yesterday.

Cahoon said the charge finally placed against him was attempting to rescue Warrick from custody of the Guardsmen and patrolmen. Both he and Switzer were released on $250 bond each last night, he said. The others were released earlier.

Company spokesmen say the present wage scale at the local Enka plant averages $1.32 an hour and that the union seeks a 10-cent hourly hike.

Members of Local 1054 went on strike in support of these pay demands, also a seniority schedule and premium pay for night work.

Strikers Return To Oak Ridge Jobs

Oak Ridge, Tenn., May 31 (AP).—Ending a week-long strike which union leaders called "unauthorized and illegal," AFL workers returned to their jobs today on vital atomic construction projects.

Hundreds of a force of 4500 workmen, who either struck themselves or honored picket lines of an affiliated union, streamed back to their jobs on the morning shift. Work was resumed on projects costing 250 million dollars.

Members of the Laborers and Hodcarriers Union quit Wednesday in protest against failure of an arbitration board to hand down an immediate decision May 23 on a wage dispute hearing conducted that day.

At a mass meeting yesterday the laborers and hodcarriers voted to go back to work after being told the arbitration board would give its decision on their wage grievance within 15 days.

Big Names on Way to Celebrities Capital Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WELL, YOU'D HAVE to say the Nats are in there trying. Conceivably, they could rue the day they dealt off both Ray Scarborough and Eddie Robinson to the White Sox, but how can you work up a pet against an honest attempt to give the town a better ball club.

At first glance the deal was, indeed, a shocker. Such as Scarborough and Robinson supposedly were indispensibles representing most of the Nats' solid core. The one their top pitcher last season, the other their leading hitter. Aligned against such guys, Cass Michaels and Bob Kuzava and John Ostrowski were merely names that have been appearing in the White Sox box scores.

POVICH

But Bucky Harris isn't concerned with fancy wrappings. The deal was his idea, and for him all three of the former White Sox hold certain charms.

Washington fans who may be quarreling with Clark Griffith for okaying the deal, have their counterparts in Chicago. There, South Side fans are questioning the astuteness of General Manager Frank Lane, and one of them suggested yesterday:

"Now, the White Sox ought to make one more deal. Trade Lane in exchange for nothing—an even swap."

WEEKS AGO, Harris and Griffith were convinced that they had a team which was safely beyond last year's eighth-place label—a club that was certain to beat out the White Sox, Browns and the A's. Now, they're shooting for the first division and willing to gamble on the kind of a deal they swung.

Harris laid the groundwork for the trade when last the Nats were in Chicago. He knew their desperation for a first baseman. When he submitted to Griffith his ideas of the three-for-three swap, he knew immediately he had the club president's approval. "They'll never agree to that deal," was Griffith's reaction. He never questioned the value of it from the Nats' standpoint.

Harris is taking the bigger gamble. All last winter, when he agreed with Griffith that the club might have to trade Scarborough to strengthen their infield, the Nats' owner was fearful of fan-reaction. Harris took him off that spot. "Call it my deal," he said. "I'll take the rap and the fans can blame me if it doesn't work out."

There wasn't much call for Harris to stick his neck out in urging the swap. He was already being acclaimed as a miracle worker by getting the Nats up in fifth place. But, un-uh. He couldn't resist taking that shot at the first division.

THE PRIME CONSIDERATION was, of course, Michaels. An old second baseman himself, Harris had a proper appreciation for the kind of skill Michaels could bring to the Nats. What he saw at second base for the Nats this year anguished him. He'll tell you freely, the second baseman is the most important guy on a ball club. Bucky wanted some of those double plays the Nats were missing, and the kind of hitting Michaels was giving the Sox.

Apparently he weighed all that against the loss of Scarborough, a good pitcher, and Robinson, who still was probably the league's best first baseman and beginning to emerge from his batting slump. He conceded that he was gambling on Irv Noren as a first baseman, but on that score he could rationalize, too.

Down in Florida last spring, Harris was planning against the day when he might trade off Robinson. He had Noren working at first base at every chance. He convinced himself that if Noren was not a finished first-sacker, he, at least, wasn't too bad at the job. It wasn't too much of a gamble for a manager who never ducked one if he was convinced he had something going for him.

Harris has been gambling all year—leaving pitchers in the box and letting them hit for themselves when other managers would have been wheeling in substitutes. And his Nats have been doing all right under his direction.

AND THERE may be considerable virtue in Kuzava and Ostrowski, as Harris reckons 'em. He was smitten with Kuzava the last time the Nats were in Chicago when the blond left-hander gave 'em three hits in seven innings and was beaten, 2-0. He reconciled the seven walks Kuzava gave up by noting that it was merely his third start in the first month of the season for a Chicago club that was top-heavy with pitchers. "The guy's rusty," said Harris then.

What he likes about Kuzava is the way the big fellow can pour the ball. More stuff than Scarborough, if not as tricky. With the Nats, Kuzava isn't going to be covered with rust. He'll get steady work, and a good shot at winning ball games for himself under Harris. Bucky wouldn't have lifted him for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning of a 2-0 game as Jack Onslow did at Chicago. Washington pitchers like their manager for that.

In the case of Ostrowski, the .227 hitting outfielder he got in the trade, Harris had background on the fellow. He saw him hit those 32 home runs and bat .318 in the Coast League last year. He saw Ostrowski, on occasion, ruin the San Diego club Bucky managed, with one of those long clouts. He liked the fellow's hustle, too. Harris was saying yesterday, "Sure Ostrowski can be pitched to. But so can everybody else. And if they make a mistake with him—watch out."

Noren Tries Robinson's Shoes for Size Tonight

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Irv Noren, who played no part in the Nats' six-player swap with the White Sox, tonight will begin to feel the repercussions. The rookie outfielder has been endowed with new status on two counts.

When the St. Louis Browns move in for the start of their three-game series, Noren will be (1) the Nats' new first baseman, and (2) their new clean-up hitter, unaccustomed as he is to those roles.

He has inherited both of Eddie Robinson's jobs with the Nats as the consequence of the deal with Chicago and Manager Bucky Harris' long-range planning. Harris groomed Noren for the first base role at every opportunity when the club was in Florida.

Signed as First Baseman

Noren's previous first-base experience was limited to the Class D California League and a short spell at the job at Fort Worth in the Texas League. But originally he was signed by the Brooklyn farm system after playing first base in junior college.

Cass Michaels, who will be unveiled as the Nats' new second baseman tonight, succeeds to Noren's former third-place hitting spot in deference to his .309 average for the season.

Harris' initial plan to move .375 hitting Sam Mele into the clean-up hitting role he later abandoned. "I don't want to disturb a fifth-place hitter who is batting that much," grinned Harris.

Marrero Pitches Tonight

There is no guarantee that Mele will be in the Nats' line-up tonight anyway. He suffered a pulled groin muscle at Shibe Park on Tuesday and hasn't fully recovered. It may call for the debut of John Ostrowski, former White Sox, in the Nats' outfield.

Conrado Marrero, drubbed by the Red Sox in his last start, will be sent back tonight by Harris. The chunky Cuban still shows two victories and no defeats.

If the Browns come up with left-handed pitchers, he envisions a batting order in which Irv Noren would be the only southpaw swinger.

IN SHORT . . . Harris spent yesterday in Philadelphia where he was held over by his dentist . . . Before the week is out, Sandalia Consuegra, ace of the Nats' Havana club of the Florida International League, will be in a Washington uniform. He won seven with Havana and his lone defeat was a 1-0 thing . . . in Cuba, Consuegra is rated a better pitcher than Marrero . . . Ostrowski makes six former Red Sox now with the Nats. He played a bit at third base for Boston in 1946 . . . Dick Weik, despite his show of wildness against the A's, will be started back against the Browns before the series is over . . . Kuzava will make his Washington debut on Sunday, against the Tigers, probably . . . of Shortstop Sam Dente, Cass Michaels said recently in Chicago, "I'd like to play second base alongside that guy" . . . if they're not the best second base-shortstop pair, they're at least the fanciest.

Thackara, Fox Play as City Tennis Resumes

Mahmud Yousuf, the latest "Terrible Turk," set a Turner's Arena record last night by beating Harry Finkelstein in only 30 seconds with a bearhug.

It was a preliminary to the main event, won by Lord Carlton in 13 minutes with a dropkick over Ivan Kamaroff. Ivan's brother, Joe, also lost in 13 minutes, to Ted Tourtose on a rocking split. The other matches, between Steve Gob and Redo Ryan, and Slim Zimbelman and Hardy Kruskamp, ended in 30-minute draws.

Proximity Again Sets World Trot Record

Fight Pilots Boycott IBC Over TV Cut

New York (Thursday), June 1 (AP).—At the stroke of midnight, fight managers launched a boycott of the International Boxing Club, which controls fights in New York and several other centers.

The move took effect with expiration of the television-radio contract between the IBC and the Managers Guild.

There is no immediate prospect of a settlement between the two groups and the "cold war" may freeze boxing out of Madison Square Garden next season altogether. That's how serious the situation is.

There is growing sentiment against boxing by some members of the Garden's board of directors. They have been demanding, it was learned, that boxing be tossed out altogether, and the dates allotted to more profitable events. Friday nights, when fights are held, are choice dates in the Garden.

As it is, the middleweight title scrap between Champion Jake LaMotta and Rocky Graziano in the Polo Grounds June 28 could be the last big fight show for New York in a long time.

The managers, whose slogan is "50-50 or no fights," have called a "monster" meeting of their membership for next Saturday.

The managers have vowed not to sign for any fights unless their demand, for 50 percent of the radio and TV receipts are met.

4th Year in Row

Billy Wolfe Qualifies For Celebrities Again

Billy Wolfe of Devitt Prep, a veteran campaigner at 16, yesterday shot his way into the National Celebrities Golf Tournament for the fourth straight year.

Billy, his cousin, Bob Wolfe, John Eisinger and Dennis Bolster earned the honor of playing in Saturday's Celebrities field by gaining the semifinals of The Washington Post's Schoolboy Tournament yesterday at Chevy Chase.

Soaked to the skin by a heavy downpour, and under pressure of Paul McMahon's best game of the season, Billy played terrific three-over par 72 golf to beat the Gonzaga ace, 2 up, in yesterday's quarterfinals.

But by this time, Billy is used to playing under pressure. He won The Post championship in 1948 and was runnerup last year to Coolidge's Dick Foster. Both matches were played during the Celebrities Tourney.

Yesterday's other quarterfinals results:

Eisinger, 18, last year's medalist from Bethesda-Chevy Chase over Hank Ford of St. Albans, 5 and 4.

Bolster, 16, Middle Atlantic Junior champion from Gonzaga over Lee Edwards of Bullis Prep, 2 up.

And Bob Wolfe, 19, this year's record breaking medalist (he shot par 70 at Manor) over Billy Ball of Western, 5 and 4.

Billy will play Eisinger and Bob will meet Bolster in the semifinals at the Celebrities tourney at Army-Navy Country Club. Winners play for the championship Sunday in the Celebrities.

The McMahon-Wolfe match was the highlight of the quarterfinals. Wolfe shot 3-over par 39 on the first nine, but could boast only a 1-up lead. Wolfe won the tenth and eleventh to go 3 up.

Paul shot a birdie 2 on the 200-yard thirteenth, and won the fourteenth, too, to pull up within one hole of a tie. They halved the next three, and Wolfe cemented his victory by winning the eighteenth.

Justice Brushing Up for Celebrities

"It's a wonderful cause and a privilege and honor to participate," Charlie Justice said last night about the National Celebrities Golf Tournament.

Interviewed by Bob Wolff over Radio Station WWDC, Justice said, "I've been practicing every day and hope I can play a good game. I'm looking forward to the tournament very much."

Each night Wolff, via transcription, interviews a different celebrity. Tonight, over WWDC (1260) at 6 p. m., he'll talk with Jim Thorpe.

Ortiz Loses His Title to South African

Johannesburg, May 31 (AP).—Vic Toweel, a speedy, young South African, won the world bantamweight championship tonight by scoring a clear-cut, 15-round decision over aging Manuel Ortiz of El Centro, Calif.

The 23-year-old onetime Johannesburg woodcarver opened up a relentless attack and piled up points in every round.

At the end of the bout, even before the decision was announced, hundreds in the crowd of 27,000 at Wembley Stadium stormed to the ring and sang: "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Ortiz and his manager, Ray Luna, stood forlornly in their corner as Toweel's hand was raised and the crowd cheered hysterically.

The defeated champion, who has held the crown for eight years with one brief interruption, said in his dressing room later there was "no doubt about the decision."

It was only the 13th fight for the South African, who won the British empire 118-pound title from Stan Rowan of England last November.

Ortiz won the championship August 7, 1942, by beating Lou Salica of Hollywood.

Mid-Atlantic Women's Golf Trials Today

Hot Springs, Va., May 31 (AP).—Qualifying round of the Middle Altantic Women's Amateur Golf Tournament, scheduled today, was postponed by rain until tomorrow.

Mrs. M. M. Alexander is one of Washington, D. C.'s big hopes. She plays Mrs. Sammy Snead, wife of the famous professional from Hot Springs.

Jim McHale Flies Home From Britain For Tourney

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nation's Capital becomes the Celebrities capital today and tomorrow as many of the most prominent persons in the Nation begin to arrive for the National Celebrities golf tournament.

By tomorrow night, most of the 100 starters in the fourth annual gee-whizzer will be in town for the two days of play at the Army Navy Country Club Saturday and Sunday, and the Bob Hope-Celebrities stage production Saturday night at the Armory.

Jim McHale, jr., long-ball hitter from Philadelphia, returned yesterday from the British amateur championship. McHale reached the British semifinals and flew back home in order to reach here in time for the Celebrities.

Hogan in Philly

From Philadelphia last night, McHale said he plans to come to Washington today or tomorrow in order to familiarize himself with the rugged Army Navy layout. He has his heart set on winning the Open championship of the Celebrities.

Ben Hogan, one of golf's all-time greatest, reported in from Philadelphia. He will spend a day or so there before coming to Washington. On the first tee of the Army Navy course, Ben will receive from Attorney General Howard McGrath a citation for making the greatest comeback in the history of sports.

Hope also was heard from yesterday. He and Frank Sinatra will fly in from California, and Sinatra will be among the guest stars on the Hope-Celebrities show.

Hope, Kaye, Godfrey, MacRae

Other stars appearing with Hope will be Arthur Godfrey, Danny Kaye, also flying from California; Gordon MacRae, coming direct from Hollywood, and more to be announced.

Armed with a new set of golf clubs, Milton Berle will drop down from New York for Saturday's round of golf.

Jug McSpaden, once one of the country's finest golf pros, phoned from New York to check on the pairings and announce he'd try to be in for a practice whirl, also.

Even the weatherman joined up yesterday. He promised bright, warm days for Saturday and Sunday. "I want to see that great field play and I don't want to get wet," he said, "so I've ordered perfect weather."

Dead-End Kid Joins Celebs

A "Dead End Kid" will do his bit to help stamp out juvenile delinquency through the National Celebrities Golf Tournament and Bob Hope show this week-end.

"Delighted to take part in the great show," said Leo Gorcey, one of the famous movie "Dead End Kids." Gorcey is visiting his father-in-law, Bud Ward, in Alexandria.

"My golf's fair," he answered. "I break 90—and I don't mean clubs."

About the Celebrities . . .

BEN HOGAN phoned yesterday from Philadelphia.

The great little Texan will play a couple of practice rounds at the Merion Cricket Club in preparation for the National Open starting there June 8.

Ben Hogan

Ben and Mrs. Hogan will come down to Washington Friday night or Saturday morning for the National Celebrities at the Army-Navy Country Club.

"Don't line up too heavy a program," he said. "I'm just getting over the flu and I still want to take it a little easy."

THE TOUCHDOWN CLUB, ever eager to lend a hand, did a nice thing yesterday. Their letter read:

"The Board of Governors of the Touchdown Club of Washington, D. C., has instructed me to forward to you the enclosed check for $100 with the request that you use it to provide tickets either to the National Celebrities golf tournament on the Bob Hope Show for a few Walter Reed or other disabled veterans. We'll leave it to you to determine the recipients.

"The Touchdown Club wishes to congratulate The Washington Post on the wonderful show you are presenting in support of a most worthy cause."

(Signed) LEE FIELD
President

Mrs. Walter Winchell built Hubby Walter a putting green in the yard of their home so that Walter could "keep his touch" for his match with Arthur Godfrey in the Celebs.

Columnist Leonard Lyons, just back from Europe, hasn't played golf since last year, will come down from New York Friday "in time to blister my hands at a driving range getting tuned up for the Celebs."

ARTHUR COOK, Olympic rifle champion, has a special pistol rigged up to "shoot a golf ball 100 yards or 500 yards" off the first tee Saturday and Sunday. "You may confidently say that I can outshoot any man in the field," said Arthur.

Thanks to Bendall Pontiac of Alexandria for making two slick new jobs available for use at the Army-Navy Country Club both tournament days.

Secretary of Treasury John W. Snyder, before leaving town on a business trip, remarked to his daughter, Drucie Snyder Horton: "All set for next weekend and the Celebrities tournament. Remember, nothing else on the docket."

The Women's Eastern Open championship in Massachusetts drew 5000 spectators for last Sunday's final round. That's a new attendance record at a strictly women's tournament.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY General Lamar Caudle, warming up for the Celebs at his home course, Myrtle Beach, S. C., got all mixed up with three black crows. They picked up three balls hit by Lamar and his brother, Charles. "It got so we sent our caddies ahead to chase the crows away," Lamar said. "Guess they thought the golf ball was an egg."

Howard Mitchell, National Symphony conductor, was city golf champion of Sioux City, Iowa, at the age of 16. In those days, Mitchell earned money for cello lessons by serving as an assistant golf pro. Later, when Mitchell was a scholarship student at Curtis Institute, he became a protege of the great cellist, Felix Salmond, primarily. Mitchell thinks, because Salmond was an avid golfer and Mitchell, his student, invariably beat the pants off him.

AT DELAWARE

DEAR FOLKS:

With Olympia, withdrawn from the opening day feature when the mud came up, has been shipped back to New York, indicating he will not go postward in Saturday's stake, Jockey Danny Scocca, Washington boy, who was away from the saddle for two years, is making a game bid in a comeback.

Other tracks could follow Delaware's suit—air-conditioned press box and press room. And it might be a good idea to air-condition the grandstand and clubhouse.

After all, it's a nonprofit track. But don't get me wrong, this a whale of a turf plant. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Rain, Mud Beat Down Favorites

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Hagerstown, Md., May 31.—After the current meeting, it is planned to tear down the grandstand and clubhouse here and rebuild. If it had rained a bit harder today, the buildings might have been washed away. This would have saved the Fair Association and the favorite players a heap of cash.

The combination of an off track and leaking skies served to bring a series of upsets, that carried into the feature race. Bee A. H., a 3-year-old owned by B. A. Hall, sr., came through with a stretch drive that produced a $90.20 win mutuel.

The filly, a miserable failure in the only other start of her career, was up in the final drive to win by a half length over A. T. Taylor's Charaine. A length and a half further back came Joe Paoli's Swim Girl, aptly-named for the day, to be third.

Jockey Joe Cruz rode Bee A. H. the about five furlongs in 1:07 and turned in a smart job. Charaine and Swim Girl did the bulk of the forward running. Charaine finally shook off her rival and seemed to be "home free." Then Bee A. H. rallied, skidded along the rail and won going away.

The longshots began popping early. F. A. Richard's Laurelita ran away with the first race to the tune of a $32.40 mutuel. Favorite players had a little hope with Easter Bonnie taking the second at a mere $3.80 to complete a $72.20 daily double mutuel on the 1 and 1 combination.

The third raee was taken by another odds-on choice, J. A. Story's Nerve getting home 15 lengths in front of the closest opposition.

Then the big mutuel guns began firing. F. J. Wilson's Better Light returned $20 in the fourth; Carl Hathaway's Eire supplied a $13.80 pay-off in the fifth; Bee A. H. paid the aforementioned $90.20 in the sixth; J. R. Heldmyer's Dawn Can accounted for the seventh at $45.20 and J. H. Miles' Bullsel took the eighth at $9.80.

This isn't Belmont, Pimlico, Delaware Park or Suffolk Downs but they pay-off with the same kind of money, if you know what I mean.

Duck Issue

Shooters Fire Away At Wildlife Reports

By Ralph Murdock

THE 1949-50 DUCK season ended five months ago but the arguments still prevail. The waterfowl forum recently conducted at Annapolis, Md., to discuss the 1950-51 bag limit and length of shooting days, turned into a riot with bitter criticism of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, reports the National Wildlife Federation.

Murdock

Dr. Clarence Cottam outlined the status of waterfowl as determined by the winter surveys in order to give the Marylanders the picture and then threw the meeting open for discussion.

The Hon. William C. Coleman, Maryland's senior Federal judge, was the leader in leveling criticism at the waterfowl management program. He favored baiting ducks throughout the area, claiming that 95 percent of the ducks killed in Maryland are shot over baited waters anyway.

The judge called for a longer season of 60-70 days with rest days and a larger bag limit than four, stating that four ducks are not enough to make it worthwhile to go out hunting.

He said that the District Attorney had come to his office about a month ago with 67 cases of baiting ducks, but he did not think it worthwhile to bring them to trial.

With few exceptions the meeting was unanimously in favor of a longer season, with more killing of ducks. This in spite of a warning that such action might result in a closed season for 1951.

J. Hammond Brown, president of the Outdoor Writer's Association of America, covering the meeting, said:

"There is little doubt that, if the Federal authorities satisfied these demands, most of the continent's waterfowl population would be wiped out in 30 days."

THE ANTICIPATED influx of hardheads has not materialized but the still fishermen are catching a few—mostly in dribbles. Benedict is still showing the best results. A catch of nine was made by Mr. and Mrs. James Stobart and Leroy Smith and his wife, Mary. The quartet fished with Capt. Kenneth Welsh out of Benedict. Peeler crab was the bait.

DOC AYERS of the District, chased Pentagon Run for his angling efforts. Doc hooked and landed five carp which ran from 6½ pounds to 14 pounds. They were all taken on a bait casting rod and a light line. It took 15 minutes to haul the big fella to shore.

ED FERELL, Art Brown and Sam Miller kept up their batting average in the piscatorial league on Sunday when they boated 38 rockfish off Holland Point. It was a morning trip with Capt. Bert Lamb at the helm.

Rain Makes It All-Stake Night At Rosecroft

Heavy rains caused Rosecroft Raceway's first postponement last night and created an all-stakes program tonight at the Oxon Hill harness plant.

All eight races will be contested by 19 class pacers and 24 class trotters who will be racing for $7500 in purses.

The pacers also are competing for the Chatterbox Club trophy which will be presented by Wash Williams, club president. The trotters have a trophy of their own, the Corinthian Yacht Club Trophy, and Commodore Jack D. Miller will make the presentation.

Last night's program would have been the ninth of the 20-night session. Only two more rain dates remain for Rosecroft.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutz

Plan to Consolidate U. S. Hospitals in One Agency Is Scrapped

The Hoover Commission plan to center all Federal hospitals in a proposed United Medical Administration has been scrapped by the White House.

This became known yesterday when the President asked the Congress to approve his latest plan to give Cabinet status to the Federal Security Agency. The Public Health Service would continue in FSA under the President's plan. It would have been the backbone of the United Medical Administration under the Hoover proposal. Veterans' groups and others fought hard against the Hoover medical proposal.

But the general idea of the Hoover plan—to bring about closer coordination of Federal hospitals and an overall hospital policy—isn't dead. The Budget Bureau is continuing its work along this line, and a congressional committee is planning a look into the same subject.

RFC: A possibility for appointment to the vacancy on the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is C. Edward Rowe, a Boston lawyer. Rowe was the New England representative on the old Smaller War Plants Corporation.

JUSTICE: Harold I. Baynton is slated to be promoted to Assistant Attorney General in charge of Alien Property. He's now acting director of Alien Property.

CAPITOL HILL: Senator O'Conor (D., Md.), yesterday put in a bill to allow any legislative employe who has at least one year of service to come in under the Civil Service retirement act.

He explains—and correctly so—that the present law discriminates against employes of subcommittees. Subcommittee employes are classified as "temporaries" and, as such, they are exempt from the retirement system. Yet many subcommittee employes have worked on "The Hill" for five and 10 years.

RETIREMENTS: Three longtime employes of the Internal Revenue Bureau yesterday were given the Albert Gallatin awards for outstanding service when they retired from Government work. They were Sidney H. Thompson, a valuation engineer; Mae M. Kinney, an accountant, and Mavida Fiske, a law clerk . . . At VA, these employes retired yesterday: William H. Circey, Elizabeth D. Lanning, Charles S. Pryor and Howard W. Woerner.

NOTES: All jobs on the staffs of Agriculture's milk market administrators have been exempted from Civil Service until June 30, 1951 . . . Miss Evelyn L. Krug has been named Miss Post Office Department by her coworkers. She's employed in the Bureau of Accounts . . . Spencer E. Sanders, chief landscape architect and site planner for the General Servces Administration, will resign to set up a business of his own in Alexandria . . . Warren Irons, chief of Civil Service's retirement division, will speak June 7 at 8 p. m. at a meeting of CIO's new Government & Civic Employes Organizing Committee at 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

INQUIRY: The House Postoffice & Civil Service Committee today will begin public hearings on the 35 bills to call off the postal economy program as ordered by Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson.

Donaldson will be the first witness. He's far more concerned over the 57,000 employes he'd have to fire if the House-approved Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders become law.

School Board To Operate Lunch and Milk Funds

'Reluctantly' Agrees To Take Over Task; Asks Approval of Central Cafeteria

The Board of Education yesterday reluctantly agreed to take over local administration of the National School Lunch and Penny Milk funds.

Board members took the action after long debate and after coupling with it a request to the District Commissioners to approve the board's central cafeteria plan.

Legal responsibility in case of an accident in a cafeteria was carefully weighed by members before they approved a recommendation by Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning giving them jurisdiction over the Federal funds.

Dr. Corning reported that the Agriculture Department had raised the point that the present distribution of funds by the Board of Public Welfare is not legal.

The act that provides Federal subsidies for school lunches makes it mandatory that the State educational agency disburse them, Corning said.

Board Member Adelbert W. Lee voted against the Corning proposal because the board at present has no authority to run cafeterias and lacks liability insurance.

Other members of the board, while approving the Corning recommendation, directed him to make an immediate study of the question of liability and insurance.

Board members pointed out that their proposed central cafeteria plan, now in the hands of the Commissioners, would give them the legal right to operate cafeterias.

Fairfax County Votes on Vital Issues

The Washington Post

A FAMILY MATTER—Heavy balloting was reported in Fairfax County as voters took to ballot boxes to settle two bond issue questions by referendum. W. F. P. Reid, election judge at Penn-Daw voting precinct, watches as Mrs. Jack Howard, who will be vitally affected by the school bond issue, casts her ballot. Mrs. Howard is accompanied by her children, Lynn, who is now attending school in Alexandria on a paid tuition basis, and Johnny, who will attend school next semester. June Funds Of HSA for Indigent Cut

Chest Federation Reduces Quota of Hospital Agency, Short in Mid-May

The Hospital Service Agency, which exhausted its $36,000 May fund for aid to semi-indigent patients in the middle of the month, will get $6000 less for June, it was announced yesterday.

Chauncey G. Parker, president of the Community Chest Federation, which makes the monthly allocations, said the reduction to $30,000 reflects the fact that there usually is a lighter case load in June.

"Such normal seasonal adjustments will help in providing funds needed for the heavier autumn months," Parker explained, adding that the procedure will permit the federation to stretch the $453,000 hospitalization fund over all 12 months of 1950.

The federation reiterated its instructions to the Hospital Service Agency to adjust its operations to keep within the monthly allocation, except, said Parker, that real eligible emergency cases are not to be denied prompt certification.

Last month's $36,000 allocation was entirely committed by May 16. HSA officials estimated yesterday the June allocation would go about as far.

Airman Directs Modern 'Iolanthe'

W/O ROBERT LANDERS, former assistant director of the San Carlo Opera Company, will direct a modern version of Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta, "Iolanthe," Friday and Saturday nights at the Watergate. The two performances will be given by the Air Force Symphony Orchestra, the "Singing Sergeants" and the Women's Glee Club of George Washington University under the sponsorship of the National Capitol Parks Commission and Government Service Inc.

Montgomery Approves Modified Hospital Bill

13-Member Group To Study Need; $500,000 Voted For Parking Lots

The Montgomery County Council last night passed a watered-down bill setting up a 13-member commission to report on the need for a new hospital.

The original "million-dollar hospital bill" would have established a commission with authority, in effect, to construct a new hospital.

The substitute bill was introduced by Thomas C. Kelley. It passed at 9:45 p. m. after hours of debate on amendments.

The commission, under the approved measure, is also charged with the coordination of medical and hospital facilities. Its report on the need for a new hospital is due April 4, 1951

$9 Million Bonds Voted

Earlier in its final day of legislative sessions, the council passed a bill authorizing the issuance of $9,454,000 in bonds for schools, roads and a new county building.

The measure includes $7,395,000 for a school program, $829,000 for roads, streets, and storm drainage facilities, and $1,230,000 for the new county building.

The sum for schools had been trimmed in previous council sessions but was restored.

Frederic P. Lee, Council president, said the county government had considered attaching provisions for a mandatory referendum to the bond-issue bill, but found such a step might be illegal.

Referendum Possible

County voters, he emphasized, may, however, request a referendum. The bonds under the bill would be tax-exempt.

The council yesterday also passed a bill to establish a special tax area for an off-street parking program in the Bethesda business district.

The bill as passed follows the boundaries of the business district map of the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

The Bethesda parking bill authorizes the county manager, subject to council's approval, to purchase or lease lots for off-street parking. Authorization of a $500,000 bond issue to pay for the lots was given in the bill. This amount is $300,000 less than the original bill.

For Bond Retirement

Retirement of the bonds would be provided for by a 40-cent tax per $100 valuation of real property in sections wholly or partly commercial. The tax would be only 20 cents if the land is classified as commercial but not used as such.

Various exemptions — ranging from 100 percent to 33 1-3 percent—are permitted, depending on off-street facilities provided for by business owners.

Other bills passed by the council at the final legislative session:

Extended boundaries of the Silver Spring business district along the lines of plans by the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission; prohibited occupancy of buildings declared unsafe; authorized setting the county primary election date to conform with the date for State primary elections, and changed the date for setting assessments on tangible personal property from May 1 to January 1.

The council killed a bill that would make 10 cents the uniform tax for maintenance of the Gaithersburg-Washington Grove fire department. The vote was 5 to 2 against.

Census Shows D.C. Downtown Store Increase

The number of retail stores in Washington's downtown business area increased between 1939 and 1948—a trend enjoyed by only four other of the Nation's large cities—Birmingham, Dallas, Houston and Memphis.

Census Director Roy V. Peel released a Census of Business study yesterday showing a marked trend of retail business to the outskirts of 32 selected cities with 250,000 or more population.

Figures for the District also show this decentralization trend. But the number of downtown area retail outlets over the period rose from 6893 to 7074—a 2.6 gain.

In 27 of the big cities an average 10 percent decline in centrally located retail stores is indicated.

Business activity in the Washington suburban centers chalked up a 36.5 percent increase in stores during the 10-year period, according to the census report. The number rose from 2243 to 3061 stores in the Washington Metropolitan area which takes in Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Two years ago the District had 69.8 percent of the stores and 74.8 percent of the sales, as against the fringe area with 30.2 percent of the stores and 25.2 percent of the sales.

Buckingham Rent Boost Is Ordered

A rent increase for Arlington's 1826-unit Buckingham Community apartments, effective July 1, was announced yesterday.

Exact increases on the Buckingham units will vary considerably, according to Manager Lawrence Kettrell.

He said one-bedroom units, which now run from $47 to $60, will cost $55 to $72 a month. Two-bedroom units, now $55 to $71, will be $62 to $81.50.

A $5 to $12 increase on apartments in the 1685-unit Parkfairfax development was announced last May 16, also effective July 1, by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which owns the project.

An official at the 3435-unit Fairlington apartments said so word had been received from the Texas owners of the units about an increase. However, he said, some "equalization" of rents is likely, since identical apartments now have three different rents fixed on them.

Spokesmen for Arlington Village and Colonial Village have stated no increases are contemplated. At the Barcroft Apartments, a representative said no decision has yet been reached.

Motorists, Lights Blink Alike as Controls Go Bad

Traffic signals in the vicinity of Rhode Island ave. and 15th st. nw. acted yesterday as if they were on a blind (color blind, that is) drunk yesterday afternoon.

Some reeled from green to red to green, and from "walk" to "don't walk" to "walk," all with kaleidoscopic rapidity, while others stubbornly refused to change, or faded completely.

All of which proved disconcerting to motorists and pedestrians. Affected were lights mostly north of Rhode Island ave. and from Scott Circle to 13th st. nw.

The colorful trouble from 3 to 3:30 p. m. was attributed to dust or dirt which caused malfunctioning of an electrical relay mechanism in a control box at 15th st. and Rhode Island ave nw., Pepco official said.

4 Additional Yokings Laid To 3 Youths

Police yesterday attributed four more yokings to a trio of juveniles detained at the Receiving Home.

The youths—two are 16, one is 17—have already boasted of committing 17 yokings, the majority of them in the Fourth Precinct. Their victims identified them in a police line-up Tuesday morning.

Police said they would not turn the youngsters over to the custody of their parents until Juvenile Court action. Juvenile papers against the youths were filed yesterday.

Woman's Body Found; Foul Play Feared

Prince Georges County Police last night were probing the possibility of foul play in the death of an unidentified Negro woman found lying on the side of the George Palmer hwy., about half a mile south of Landover rd., Md.

Dr. John T. Maloney, County Medical Examiner, said the woman had died of a skull fracture and brain lacerations. She also suffered a broken collar bone, a broken right leg and 12 fractured ribs. The fact there were no signs of bleeding about the bone breaks indicated that she was dead before the bones were broken, he said.

Dr. Maloney said it was possible the woman was forced to jump, was thrown or fell from a moving car. Then she may have been hit by another car.

Heightening the mystery was the fact her body was first discovered lying in the middle of the road about 2:30 a. m. by three passersby. The passersby left the scene to summon police who found the body had been moved to the side of the road.

Virginia SCC Hears A. B. & W. Fare Boost Piece

Richmond, Va., May 31 (AP).—A petition by Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. for intrastate bus fare increases was taken under advisement this afternoon by the State Corporation Commission.

The SCC took the case after a day-long hearing during which the petition was opposed by counsel for the Arlington County Board.

A. B. & W. is seeking permission to increase zone fares by 5 cents and make some changes in the rate structure in a so-called metropolitan intrastate zone including South Arlington and Alexandria.

In addition, the company also has two petitions before the Interstate Commerce Commission for fare boosts on operations between points in northern Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Convict Jumps From Window Of Hospital

Row Lee Browley, 47, facing 15 years in the State penitentiary for robbery, jumped to freedom early yesterday through a first-floor window of Alexandria Hospital.

Clad only in a white hospital nightshirt, Browley made his escape at 12:30 a. m., eluding unarmed jail guard John A. Veringo.

Police Inspector Russell Hawes said he understood Veringo was standing in the hallway and saw Browley jump 10 feet through the screened window, but didn't follow the man because he had no gun.

A lookout was broadcast to East Coast States as far south as North Carolina, Hawes said, but no leads had been reported late yesterday. Police said Browley is a Negro, 5 feet 6, weighing 160, and wearing a mustache.

Browley entered the hospital about a week ago for treatment of an acute infection of the lower abdomen, hospital officials said.

Alexandria police arrested Browley last November in connection with the murder of Raymond B. Dodson, 49, refrigerator engineer, who was beaten to death near the Mutual Ice Plant.

Man Dies in Leap Into River From Sousa Bridge

A man identified as Oliver G. Harter, 56, jumped to his death at 3:45 p. m. yesterday from the Sousa Bridge, police said.

Orestes Bachanan of 16 Stoddert pl. se., a cab driver, saw the man jump from the west end of the bridge. Harbor Police recovered the body a short time later.

Identification came from a friend. Police said the dead man had no fixed address.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide. He said there was no apparent motive.

She Drops Suit

Lawrences Agree on Settlement

Mrs. Eilene Diana Latta Lawrence has agreed to a "financial settlement" and will drop her suit for separate maintenance from Navy Capt. Harold A. Latta Lawrence, it was learned yesterday.

The suit was to be tried in District Court, but attorneys in the case called it off. Formal filing of dismissal will be accomplished later, the attorneys said.

Mrs. Lawrence, a 43-year-old blonde former model residing at the Wardman-Park, confirmed the settlement, but said that on advice of her attorneys, she would give no details.

Asked whether the agreement was satisfactory to her, she replied:

"I would have much preferred a happy married life. I will now return to my home in California and seek a divorce."

Captain Lawrence, who had an apartment at the Shoreham, could not be reached for comment. He was a former aide to the Chief of Naval Operations and is now on inactive status in the Naval Reserve.

The Lawrences married in 1948. Representing Mrs. Lawrence in the settlement was Attorney David Cobb. Joseph McGroary represented Captain Lawrence.

College to Honor Lutheran Official

The Rev. Dr. Gould Wickey, 7516 16th st. nw., executive secretary of the Board of Education of the United Lutheran Church, will receive the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters from Newberry College, Newberry, S. C., at commencement exercises Friday.

Dr. Wickey once served as pastor of the Georgetown Lutheran Church here.

False-Nose Bandit Robs The Tick-Tock

A false-nose bandit yesterday robbed the Tick Tock Tavern, near the University of Maryland, of about $1200.

It was the second time within two weeks that the tavern had been robbed. On May 19 four bandits held up Mr. and Mrs. Walter (Jimmy) Longcope, proprietors, for $2169, police were told.

Longcope said he and his wife, Betty, were awakened in their room at the rear of the tavern, at University lane and Riggs rd., by a rap on his shoulder and the command:

"Turn over and mind your own business. I know where everything is."

Longcope rolled over in bed to face a tall, blond-haired man.

When Mrs. Longcope protested, the intruder slapped her on the shoulder with what appeared to be a blackjack, she said, and then he threatened to bind her

The robber took $130 from Mrs. Longcope's purse, $210 from Longcope's wallet, more cash from a box in the table drawer and from a file cabinet, the tavern keeper reported.

According to Longcope, the robber warned them to "lie still for five minutes," then yanked loose the wires of the bedroom telephone.

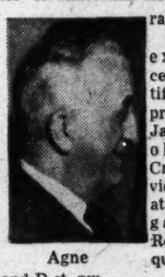
The Longcopes waited, then phoned police.

Longcope, who said he was insured against robbery, indicated he thought yesterday's robber was one of the May 19 quintet. He described him as about 5 feet 10 with straight blond hair, wearing a false rubber nose without the usual accompanying glasses, a white shirt and red tie, dark gloves, a pepper and salt jacket and dark trousers. A hankerchief partly covered the thug's face, Longcope reported.

Meanwhile, two men were being held yesterday in connection with other false nose robberies in Maryland and the District. They have admitted three holdups, according to police.

R. C. Agne Retires From Red Cross After 30 Years

A farewell party was given for Royal C. Agne yesterday afternoon on his final day as national director of American Red Cross fund raising.



Agne

The retiring executive received a certificate of appreciation from James T. Nicholson, Red Cross executive vice president, at an informal gathering in Red Cross headquarters, 17th and D st. nw.

Mr. Agne, who lives at 3825 Livingston st. nw., had been connected with the organization off and on for the past 30 years. He will be succeeded today by Frederic S. Laise, recently assistant manager of the Red Cross Eastern Area office at Alexandria.

Jelleff to Receive Cosmopolitan Club Award Today

Frank R. Jelleff, Washington businessman and civic leader, will receive the Cosmopolitan Club's distinguished service medal today at a special luncheon at 12:15 p. m. in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

The Cosmopolitan Club's medal is presented annually to the Washingtonian who "performed the most outstanding unselfish service for the city of Washington during the previous year."

The award will be presented to Jelleff by John A. Reilly, chairman of the club's committee on the award. The club president, Robert C. Carter, will preside at the luncheon.

Baby Hurt by Scissors

Walter Hardester, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hardester, of 4539 Lily Ponds dr., ne., was reported in comfortable condition at Gallinger Hospital last night after he had jabbed a small pair of scissors into the right side of his head.

Correction

Dr. Otto Klineberg, Columbia University professor of psychology, will discuss "Psychological Aspects of International Relations" at Sternberg Auditorium, Walter Reed Hospital, on Friday at 8 p. m. instead of 2 p. m as printed in Wednesday's issue The Washington Post regrets the error.

House Eulogizes Lemke and Adjourns

The House yesterday eulogized the late Representative William Lemke and then adjourned out of respect for him.

Rep. Lemke

The North Dakota Congressmen died Tuesday in Fargo, N. Dak. He was seeking a ninth term in the House and also wanted to do some spring planting. He was 71. Death was attributed to a heart disease.

Representative Lemke was running for reelection as a Republican. He sat in the House with the Republicans, but listed himself as "Nonpartisan elected on the Republican ticket." He had been a leader in the Nonpartisan League.

His identity with the GOP became remote in 1936 when he ran for President on the Union Ticket. The House Republicans took away all his committee seniority. In the Presidential race he got 822,479 votes, to 27,476,673 for Franklin D. Roosevelt and 16,679,583 for Alfred Landon. Representative Lenke had hedged by running sumultaneously for his House seat, which he won.

He climbed back up in Republican seniority to second place on the minority side of the Public Lands Committee.

A week ago yesterday, the House passed three of the bills he had sponsored and reported from the Public Lands Committee.

Colleagues of both parties recalled Representative Lemke's work for the three bills in paying tribute to him yesterday. The House then named a bi-prtisan committee of nine members to attend the funeral.

In his four years as a Congressman before he hit the Presidential campaign circuit, Representative Lemke's sponsorship of measures to lighten the load of the depression on farmers had made his name known nationally. Best known was the Frazier-Lemke moratorium law.

Representative Lemke won his first election to the House in 1932. He served four terms, then in 1940, after winning the primary for another term, he resigned to run against Senator William Langer, (R. N. Dak) who won

After two years out of office, Representative Lemke returned for the first of four more terms in the election of 1942.

Representative Lemke was born at Albany, Minn. His family moved to North Dakota when he was a child. He was graduated from the University of North Dakota in 1902. He studied law at Georgetown University here, and at Yale where he received his law degree in 1905. He began law practice in Fargo in 1905.

His widow, Mrs. Isabelle Lemke, was in Washington when he died. Their home here is at 3417 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va.

Two sons also survive. They are Robert Lemke, attorney in the Department of the Army, who lives at 1713 Preston rd., Alexandria, Va., and William Lemke, jr., attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, who lives in Evanston, Illinois.

Aides of the Congressman said Mrs. Lemke and her two sons flew from Washington to Fargo yesterday after William, jr., joined his mother here. Representative Lemke also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Mary Ely, of Webster Grove, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. C. F. Clark, of Hot Springs, Ark.

Waiters' Local

E. T. Deegan, Union Aide, Dies at 71

Edward Thomas Deegan, 71, former president of the Waiter and Waitress Local 781 (AFL), died unexpectedly Tuesday night at his home, 1344 Shepherd st. nw.

Mr. Deegan

A native of Pennsylvania, Mr. Deegan had lived in the District 33 years.

He had worked at the Carlton, Mayflower and Shoreham Hotels.

Mr. Deegan served two terms as president of the local waiters' union and was elected recently as its sergeant-at-arms. He was also a member of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Blanch Deegan, and a sister, Mrs. Fanny Fitzpatrick of Seattle, Wash.

The Moose will hold services at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N st. nw., at 8:30 p. m. today.

A mass will be said at Sacred Heart Church at 10 a. m. Friday. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

H. S. Hadden Is Dead: Was Ad Executive

New York, May 31 (AP).—Howard Stevens Hadden, 77, retired advertising executive and sportsman, died yesterday in Doctors Hospital after a long illness.

After a career in advertising, Hadden retired in 1930 as chairman of Doland, Inc., an international advertising company. Since that time he had resided at Springbank Plantation, Kingstree, S. C. He was a member of the advisory board of the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of Brooklyn.

Michael O'Hanlon, Auto Firm Head Dies; Rites Set Friday

Michael O'Hanlon, 82, auto dealer, died Tuesday at his home, 7164 Alaska ave. nw., following a long illness. He had been bedridden since suffering a cerebral thrombosis a year ago, his family said yesterday.

Mr. O'Hanlon

Mr. O'Hanlon founded the Triangle Motor Co. here and was its president for 20 years.

Born in County Armaugh, Ireland, he came to Washington in 1888. He received his bachelor's and master's degree in law at Georgetown University.

After a brief period in law practice, Mr. O'Hanlon, barnstormed the country by air, selling trimotored airplanes.

He was a director of the old Seventh Street Savings Bank, which the Hamilton Bank took over in 1933. He was a member of the Society of Oldest Inhabitants, the Manor Club and a former member of the Washington Board of Trade.

Mr. O'Hanlon was a member of the Manresa Club and Holy Name Society in Nativity parish.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Nellie Rocca O'Hanlon; four sons, Ardle, Murray, John and Rodger, and a daughter, Miss Roma O'Hanlon, all of whom live at the Alaska ave. address.

Requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m. Friday in the Church of Nativity, 13th and Peabody sts. nw. Burial will be at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Funeral Rites Held For Mrs. J. R. Panitz

Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Julius R. Panitz, 55, of 1504 Varnum st. nw., who died Tuesday at Emergency Hospital.

The services were in the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial was in Hebrew Friendship Cemetery, Baltimore.

Mrs. Panitz, the former Sara Fannie Panitz of Baltimore, had lived in Washington for more than 30 years. Her husband is associated with Youdie's, Inc., men's clothing store at 1342 G st. nw.

Mrs. Panitz was a member of the B'nai Israel Congregation here and was formerly active in Hadassah.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Morton J. Panitz, and a daughter, Miss Helen S. Panitz, both of the Varnum st. address. Also a sister, Mrs. Nat Oscar of 4210 Arkansas ave. nw., and three brothers, Isadore, Morris and Abraham Panitz, all of Baltimore.

Capital Transit Moves Lost and Found Office

Capital Transit's Lost and Found Department will move from 1416 F st nw., to 3222 M st. nw., Georgetown, on Monday, the company announced yesterday. The new location is part of the company's plan to centralize as many of its departmental activities as possible.

The Personnel and Employment Department, formerly at 3132 M st. nw., was relocated this past week in the company's general office at 36th and M sts. nw. Weekly passes, tokens and school tickets will continue to be sold at the Charter Coach Dept., 1416 F st. nw.

Hotel Bill Jails Ursula Parrott

Georgetown, Del., May 31 (U.P.).—Novelist Ursula Parrott preferred to go to jail today rather than return to Maryland, where she is wanted on a charge of running out on a $255.20 hotel bill.

The 47-year-old, four-times-divorced author refused to waive extradition to Princess Anne, Md., where she faces a charge of checking out of the Washington Hotel without paying her six-month bill. She offered to pay the bill by check, but Mrs. Daisy Shrieves, owner of the hotel, asked cash.

Army Finance Chief Headed Private Firm

Maj. Gen. Louis A. Craig, Army Inspector General, testified yesterday that Maj. Gen. William H. Kasten, former Army finance chief, used Government offices and employes to set up a $38,000-a-month servicemen's insurance company while on active duty.

He told a House Armed Services subcommittee that, although the firm is a nonprofit organization known as the Armed Forces Mutual Benefit Association, its officers received salaries.

Col. Resser L. Hunter, director of investigation for the Inspector General's Office, said that Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, who succeeded to Kasten's Army post, now is a vice president of the company. He also said most of its directors are active Army, Navy and Air Force officers.

Recommended for Censure

While there is no question of illegality, Craig said Kasten was recommended for censure on grounds that an Army officer should not devote time to extra-curricular activities that might interfere with official business.

Kasten has denied he worked for the firm on Army time. He has admitted using Government facilities.

The subcommittee is investigating charges of money mismanagement and Communist infiltration at the Army's huge St. Louis Finance Center. The charges were made by Mrs. Sally Dewey, a former center employe who was identified yesterday as an undercover agent for Army Counter-Intelligence.

Charles Johnson of the General Accounting Office told the subcommittee a woman accused by Mrs. Dewey of trying to walk off with 750 uncashed servicemen's checks had been under observation by the Army before the alleged incident.

Johnson said Brig. Gen. E. J. Bean, the center's commanding officer, told the GAO a subordinate officer asked that the woman employe, Miss Burdella Eaddy, be watched because she often stayed in her office after other employes left.

Mrs. Dewey has testified that Miss Eaddy tried to walk off with the checks but was stopped by a guard. Miss Eaddy has denied the story and offered to take a lie detector test.

Craig also testified that Miss Eaddy at one time was "under surveillance and was searched one or more times." But he said nothing incriminating was found.

Had Rent-Free Offices

As for the insurance firm, Craig said it was organized two years ago by Kasten. For about a year it operated in offices at the Pentagon and at Gravelly Point Army Headquarters here.

He said an investigation disclosed that Kasten used "rent-free Government offices, typewriters and telephones, and, to a limited extent, Government employes to set up the insurance company."

The company made life insurance available to officers of the armed forces who had been ordered overseas. Craig said it had the jump on private companies because it knew in advance when prospective customers would receive overseas assignments.

Craig said there was no evidence that Kasten received a salary from the company while he was in the service. He said he assumed Kasten receives one now since he is retired and still heads the firm.

Maryland U. Budget Approved

Annapolis, Md., May 31 (AP).—The Board of Public Works today approved a $14,688,050.94 working budget for the University of Maryland without adding or subtracting a penny.

That is the amount President H. C. Byrd estimated the university would take in and spend in the 1951 fiscal year, which starts this July 1.

In other actions, the board:

1. Sold 25 million dollars worth of Maryland bonds, obtaining premiums which reduced the 1.5 coupon rate to a net of 1.403 percent. Most of the money goes for school construction.

2. Took under advisement a plan for a $58,000 partial work program in Garrett County State recreational areas to help solve unemployment in western Maryland.

3. For the second time declined to authorize the university to borrow Federal funds for planning of new construction at College Park, Baltimore and Princess Anne divisions.

4. Authorized the university to buy, for $200,000, the site for a psychiatric institute of the University Hospital, on property owned by the second English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Baltimore.

After a bit of wrangling between representatives of banking groups and a double-check with Attorney General Hall Hammond, the board granted three separate issues to a syndicate headed by the National City Bank of New York and the First Boston Corporation.

A key sentence in advertising the bonds saved the issue for National City-First Boston. Otherwise they would have gone to a syndicate headed by Harris Trust & Savings Bank.

Japan Now at Ideological Crossroads, Grew Asserts

Democracy, based upon Christian principles and a high moral code, is the only road which will lead Japan back to her "proper and honored place" in the family of nations, Joseph C. Grew said yesterday.

Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, spoke at a luncheon at the Washington Hotel attended by clergymen and laymen interested in the work of the Japan International Christian University.

The university, which will include undergraduate and graduate schools, is in the midst of a two-year drive for 10 million dollars. Grew is national chairman of the campaign.

Japan today, he said, stands at the cross roads. One road, he said, leads back to the old military feudalism, another leads to communism.

The proposed university, he said, can profoundly influence Japan's young people to find the answer to their nation's problems in democracy. It will play an important part in combating communism in the entire Far East, Grew said.

The faculty of the university, which will be composed of educators from many nations, will gather on some American university campus during 1951 for seven months of work on the program of the school, Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, president of the University Foundation, said.

Bishop Yoshimune Abe, chairman of the Church of Christ of Japan, stressed the need for Christian teaching in his homeland.

Oil Importers Are Invited to Meet Charges

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) yesterday publicly invited the Nation's big petroleum companies to present their side of the argument that their cheap oil imports are seriously reducing employment in the domestic coal, oil, and railroad industries.

The West Virginian, who heads a Senate Labor Subcommittee investigating the causes of acute unemployment in a number of American industries, denied reports that the oil importers have been refused permission to testify before the group.

Neely insisted that no spokesmen of the major importers has as yet volunteered to testify. He said that any such spokesman would be enthusiastically heard and questioned.

The attack on oil imports was continued yesterday by J. P. Jones, of the National Stripper Well Association, and Stark Fox, of the Oil Producers Agency of California.

Jones said that oil imports were creating uncertainty among the "strippers," who recover oil from fields which have passed peak production, and cutting down on their operations. Fox charged that cutbacks in California oil fields were directly attributable to excessive cheap oil imports on the Atlantic seaboard.

James Boyd, director of the Federal Bureau of Mines, yesterday wrote the Neely Subcommittee, urging that Congress study the possibility of revising the Nation's tax structure with the view of helping out the nonferrous mining industry, currently suffering a severe recession. Dr. Boyd said the present tax system has hindered the investment of capital in new mining enterprises.

Meanwhile, spokesmen for the chemical industry urged the State Department's Committee on Reciprocity Information not to cut the present tariffs on chemical imports.

Donald K. Ballman, of Dow Chemical Co., said the tariff cuts would force some American producers out of business and might make it impossible ever to develop "some of the most critical materials of the future."

William M. Rand, of Monsanto Chemical Co., chairman of the board of the Manufacturing Chemists Association, said lowering tariffs in the midst of the cold war would endanger the American economy and strengthen Russia's military potential.

Muter Votes Dividend

Muter Co., Chicago, declared a quarterly dividend of 15 cents a share on the new common stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 15. The company paid a 100 percent stock dividend on May 15 prior to which 60 cents was paid each December in the last three years.

Feeling at a Loss With the Girl He Loves, Bachelor Drifted Into Marriage Plans With A More Enterprising Lady; How Escape Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bachelor, nine years out of college, still living at home, and my greatest desire is to get settled on my own, as most of my friends already are. But it seems my anxiety has played tricks on me. I am practically engaged to one girl and in love with another.

I am reasonably sure that Alice, the girl I love, is in love with me, too. We double dated a few times with one of my fraternity brothers and his girl, who had already set the date for their wedding, and because everything seemed so wonderful for him, I felt somewhat at a loss with Alice. I probably thought she was cooler to me than she was, although we had much fun together.

Then I met Margaret, who is older than Alice and more settled, and in no time at all we were going steady. Evidently Margaret had had much experience with men, for she seemed to sense it would be very easy to fit herself into my life, which she did. Now her plans have gone so far that it looks as if we'll be heading for the altar in a few weeks, unless I can find a way out.

Financee Takes Charge

I SUPPOSE I had expected Alice, who is six years by junior, to fall in love with me after a few dates. I realize now that she wasn't ready to marry when I first met her, and Margaret was. I thought marriage was what I most wanted, but I feel marriage to Margaret would be a lifelong mistake, and that I am just going headlong in a daze and will wake up too late to save myself.

Margaret has me at her beck and call, and something tells me this is all wrong, yet when I am with her I feel there is nothing else for me to do. What is the matter with me? Am I just a weak willing soul? I don't believe Margaret loves me any more than I love her, but even if she does, I don't think it is right to go on this way. I should have started facing facts sooner, but circumstances just blinded me, I guess.

Alice would make a wonderful mate and an ideal mother for my children, and I cannot see Margaret in this role actually. I know that with Alice our home life would be gay and happy down through the years, and with her by my side I wouldn't mind facing life's inevitable trials. But even though I know this in my heart, I don't want to hurt Margaret. So where am I? If I knew how to get started back with Alice, everything would work out, I think. Can you outline a course of action, to put things right before too late? E. B.

Home Training Made Him Passive

DEAR E. B.: In condensing your letter, I've had to cut out the background material, which gives a picture of family life from which the highly successful industrialist father is mostly absent, leaving mother to rule the roost. You say of the children, "We stayed very closely home with mother, and all of us are very much the home type." You describe your dad as very dynamic and the center of attention when home. You'd like to get completely away from his field of gravity.

From all this one gathers that you've been only a satellite in relation to father and mother thus far in life. In trying to get centered and settled "on your own," how far do you get? Only as far as Margaret, it seems. And how far is that? No distance at all. You encountered in her the perfect substitute for mama and papa. She has the combined aggression and managerial competence of both. That's why you got involuntarily involved, with no true love exchanged.

Your difficulty with Alice, whom you might love in an ardently cherishing way, as a real man should love his mate, is due to the fact that you are passive in personal relations, and so is she. This means that she is essentially more feminine than Margaret, who is a buccaneer in petticoats, and that you are psychologically less virile than a man should be. Unless you can be confidently masculine in courting Alice, she feels at a loss with you, whereas Margaret is quite at ease in the driver's seat.

Turn Tide; Start to Grow

You dread hurting Margaret due to mother-identification, I suppose. Unconsciously you are not sure you can get through life without her to lead you by the nose, even though her type is a familiar hairshirt you'd like to discard forever. Alice appeals as a soulmate due to kindred sensitivity, and because instinct suggests that you might become truly a man in relation to her diffident pliable nature. And I think you might, if you will tackle the considerable task of outgrowing the defects of your rearing, which have "conditioned" you to be a dependent unmanly character.

My advice is to tell Margaret that you've been drifting and are sorry for it; and that a lifetime alliance between you and her is absolutely "out," because marriage twixt you two would be a mistake made without love, on your part at least. Assure her of your respect, admiration, friendship, etc., but be firm on the point that there's no more to it. If she rages, weeps or otherwise brings pressure to bear, stand your ground and keep in the clear; and don't refer to Alice at all.

M. H.

"Kiss-Kiss, Bang-Bang"

Hollywood Helps Soviet, General Federation Told

BOSTON, May 31, (U.P.)—Hollywood movies have made the peoples of the Orient and Middle East suspect the United States as a "kiss-kiss, bang-bang" Nation, a foreign affairs expert said today.

Brooks Emeny of New York, president of the Foreign Policy Association, told the 59th annual convention of the general federation of Women's Clubs that Communist propaganda finds a fertile field in the same areas of the Middle East and Far East.

He said residents of these areas suspect the United States because of the "visual impressions of our materialism, of our immorality, of our general civilization, which have been derived from . . . cheap and shoddy Hollywood products."

"I heard on frequent occasions this country spoken of as a 'kiss-kiss, bang-bang' civilization," Emeny told 2500 convention delegates representing 10 million clubwomen throughout the world.

Emeny said that unless the West acts soon to improve living conditions in the Middle East and Far East, those areas will be lost to Communism.

"The Orientals are a people who have known tyranny for centuries," he said. "Tyranny under Communism, therefore, is nothing new. They have likewise known such depths of poverty that the relative poverty of the Soviet masses appears well-being."

He advocated support of President Truman's so-called "Point Four" program for economic assistance to under-developed areas.

Delegates to the convention voted approval of the controversial "universal membership" amendment to the Federation's by-laws. It provides that all clubs in a State federaion automatically are members of the General Federation.

This made all club members subject to a 25-cent annual tax to be paid to the general federation.

The amendment was opposed by the State federations of South Carolina, Massachusetts, New York, Nevada, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia. These federations did not operate under "universal membership."

The vote meant they must meet the provisions of the by-law or leave the general federation. The vote was 607 to 138.

Union Day Damp, but Nobody Wants to Be Dry

By Marie McNair

SOUTH AFRICA'S orange, blue and white-striped flag hung from the embassy doorway yesterday, sodden with rain. The red rambler roses bloomed bravely on the garden wall. But heavy showers in the afternoon spoiled any hopes the South African Ambassador and Mrs. Jooste might have held that their party could be held outdoors.

It was a Union Day celebration at the embassy and the first big official fete at which the Ambassador and Mrs. Jooste were hosts since they arrived in Washington last September.

They're a good-looking pair, young and gracious. For the party Mrs. Jooste chose a moss green nylon net gown, the skirt cascading in layers of paler hue to make the new uneven hemline. A pink rose was tucked at the neckline, another at the waist.

Diplomatic Corps Lacks Distaff Side

WHERE were the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps? The French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, came along; the Danish Ambassador Hendrik de Kauffmann also offered his feliciations without Mme de Kauffmann, and I saw the Australian Ambassador, Norman Makin, coming up the stairway by himself. Likewise, the Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin.

The Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens, and the Luxembourg Minister, Hughes LeGallais, did the party honors for the family, too. The British Ambassador and Lady Franks made a twosome, however, and with the Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina, came Senora de la Colina.

The Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila were among those lingering on, and the Panama Ambassador and Senora de Herbruger were among those enjoying cold salmon, cold turkey and ham, vegetable and fruit salads, ice cream and cake from the long buffet.

Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State, left her husband at his desk and was introducing Sir Leslie Rowan, whose wife was home with a new baby.

Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was among one of the first to arrive and was soon on her way again. Mrs. George Thorpe, another early caller, was hurrying home to greet a guest for dinner. Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin were in dinner clothes, bound for another party, and Mrs. McCeney Werlich, handsome in a slim black dinner gown, was going later to the buffet supper given by the Iraq Minister and Mme. Bakr.

A VISITOR from Ceylon, Mme. G. S. Sinnatamby, wife of a distinguished Ceylonese surgeon, came with the Ceylonese Ambassador and Mme. Corea, the two ladies in bright saris bordered in gold. On her first visit to this country, Mme. Sinnatamby admitted she was having "a wonderful time," sightseeing and taking in embassy parties.

Assistant Secretary of State George McGhee and pretty Mrs. McGhee in brown chiffon breezed in. The Pakistan Minister, M. O. A. Baig, was there and I saw Representative and Mrs. Clark W. Thompson; Mrs. Estes Kefauver, wife of the Tennessee Senator; the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani; the Charge d'Affaires of Greece and Mme. Economou-Gouras, and the Latvian Minister, Jules Feldmans and Mme. Feldmans.

Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt was telling friends she's leaving town the first of July; Edgar Morris and Mrs. Morris were being congratulated on their successful Sunday party. Others there were Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, jolly in a red, white and blue Egyptian print; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mosier, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Paul King, and Lady Dalrymple-Hamilton and her daughter, Christian.

Iraq Minister Gives Reception

ABDULLAH IBRAHIM BAKR, Minister Plenipotentiary of Iraq, and Mme. Bakr entertained last evening at the embassy. Over 200 guests were invited to a buffet supper and reception, held from 8 to 10 p.m.

In the gathering were diplomats of the Far East and Middle East and State Department officials, Congressmen, and representatives of the Bank and Fund. These included the Ambassador of Saudi Arabia and Mme. Al-Faqih, the Ambassador of Ceylon and Mme. Corea, the Ambassador of Thailand and Princess Wan Waithayakon, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George McGhee and the Assistant Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Raymond Muir.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Armix Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hare, Mr. and Mrs. Wells Stabler, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kopper, Representative and Mrs. Ed Gossett, Representative and Mrs. Tom Steed, Mr. and Mrs. Zaki Saad, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Iliff and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Burland.

The Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani last night attended the performance of Il Trovatore, Italian-produced film of the famous opera now showing at the new Plaza Theater. Their guests were several members of the embassy staff and their wives.

New Army Advisor Honored at Party

EARL D. Johnson, who became the new Assistant Secretary of the Army yesterday, shared honors with Mrs. Johnson at a late day cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marcus of Dallas, Tex., to celebrate the event. Mr. Marcus, vice president of Neiman-Marcus in Dallas, and Mrs. Marcus, entertained in the Burgundy Room at Wardman Park Hotel where both they and the Johnsons are staying.

Invited to the fete were the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Louis Johnson, the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, jr., the Assistant Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Archibald Alexander, Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, Undersecretary of the Army and Mrs. Tracy Voorhees, and Under Secretary of State and Mrs. James Webb.

Others were Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Omar Bradley and Mrs. Bradley, Assistant Secretaries of Defense Paul Griffith and Marx Leva with Mrs. Griffin and Mrs. Leva, former Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray, Vice Chief of Staff Gen. Wade Haislip and Mrs. Haislip, Gen. and Mrs. Matthew B. Ridgway, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. James H. Burns, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. James B. Cross and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Luke W. Finlay.

Colombian Air Leader Honored

Col. Gabriel Pineras, director general of the Colombian Air Force who is in Washington for a short stay before touring the U. S. Air Force bases and installations, was guest of honor at a stag cocktail party given yesterday by Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, USAF, at the Army-Navy Country Club. Attending Colonel Pineras at the party were Capt. Manuel Navia, commanding officer of the Colombian Flying Training School; Lieut. Hernando Nieto, adjutant general of the Colombian Air Force, and Capt. Henry W. Taylor, jr., WSAF, who will be escort officer on the tour.

The Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Eduardo Zuleta-Angel, was a guest.

At a small and informal ceremony yesterday afternoon at the Norwegian Embassy, Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne presented the Knight Cross, First Class, of the Royal Order of St. Olav to two outstanding journalists. Receiving the decorations were Walter Lippmann and Arthur Krock for their services to Norway both during and after the war, through the means of their newspaper columns.

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne was present and also Mrs. Krock and Mrs. Lippmann. There was champagne for the small gathering following the ceremony.

Engaged Couple Guests at Party

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Roberts entertained about 40 guests at their home in Waverly Hills, Va., Tuesday night in honor of Miss Nell Broyhill and John W. Hardell, jr., whose wedding will take place Saturday afternoon at Broy-Hill, home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin T. Broyhill. The couple has been entertained at a continuous round of parties since their engagement was announced on Easter Sunday.

Miss Broyhill and Miss Marcia Ellsworth, who will also be a bride on Saturday, were joint recipients at a shower last Thursday at the home of Miss Betty DeForce in Washington.

Miss Broyhill and her fiance will be entertained with members of their wedding party at a dinner Friday evening at the Washington Golf and Country Club preceding the wedding rehearsal.

Cancer Research Wins Award

JUST what makes cancerous cells grow so fast? That vital question is the chief concern of Dr. Mary E. Maver, a research biochemist at the National Cancer Institute.

And for her unrelenting probe into the secrets of cell life within malignant body tissues the tall white-haired scientist will be given this year's Silver Medal Award of Honor from the Soroptimist Club of Washington. She will receive the medal at the club's banquet June 10 at the Willard Hotel.

Dr. Maver, daughter of Dr. Maria Blair Maver who devoted most of her life to the study of Rocky Mountain spotted fever, has been associated with the National Cancer Institute for more than 10 years. Her most recent work is in the field of protein enzymology, where she hopes to find some clue why cancer cells multiply at such a terrific rate.

Quiet, unassuming Dr. Maver has a corner laboratory in the Cancer Institute at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda.

With her laboratory assistant and a dishwasher, she spends her days making painstaking tests with a complicated looking array of machines, scales and microscopes.

When she gets home to the house on Reno rd., which she shares with her sister, Miss Kate Maver of the State Department, the biochemist usually continues her work, reading or preparing papers on her research.

For relaxation Dr. Maver tends the small flower garden in back of her house. She loves plants and even keeps a large African violet on one of her work tables at the laboratory.

"No, it has nothing to do with cancer research," she says. "I just like to have it around."

Before Miss Turner Came:

'Rule Days' Weren't So Golden

THE Mabel Turner who retires this week as principal of National Cathedral School for Girls is the same soft-spoken Mabel Turner who immediately won the students' admiration when she came to the school in 1929.

But it doesn't seem like the same school. When Miss Turner first arrived at the old stone schoolhouse on the grounds of Washington Cathedral, girls were marching to classes in pencil-straight lines with perfect cadence. They wore no lipstick and school was an ordeal of hard-work, chaperonage and rules.

No Escorts

At "gym" classes the girls draped themselves in blue serge bloomers and long black stockings to swing Indian clubs in rhythm with a piano and violin. At the junior prom girls danced with each other. No boys.

And now, 21 graduating classes later, the school is transformed. Students may—and do—bring boy friends to their dances. They play field hockey in trim shorts, and, along with their academic studies, there's a lot extra that seeps in," according to Miss Turner.

Some of the elements that "seep in," she says, include "a fundamental conviction with which to face the insecurities of life, and a capacity for enjoying the good things in life."

They All Change

As for the school's transformation since her arrival, the beloved principal doesn't like to assume much credit. "All schools have changed considerably in the last 21 years," she comments modestly.

Her former students, however, will tell you otherwise. That first day she came to address the students "she was so sweet it made us cry," remembers one of the alumnae.

And from that day on none of the girls dreaded a call to the principal's office. They found Miss Turner a good friend and personal adviser.

On the eve of her retirement Miss Turner doesn't care much for looking back on old times. "I'd rather continue to live in the future," she says.

One of her last jobs as principal, however, is to help with arrangements for the school's fiftieth anniversary celebration, which opens with an outdoor pageant Friday and closes Tuesday, June 6, with commencement exercises at the cathedral.

Rings On Their Fingers

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. T. Raymond Burch of Hitching-Post-Hill, College Park, Md., of the engagement of their daughter, Helen Cecilia, to James Wesley Robb, jr., son of J. W. Robb and Mrs. Olga B. Robb of Silver Spring, Md.

Miss Burch is a graduate of the Academy of the Holy Cross, Washington. Mr. Robb is a scientific aide at the National Institute of Health and also attends Montgomery Junior College. He will finish his schooling at the University of Maryland. Mr. Burch, father of the bride-elect, is a member of the Maryland General Assembly from Prince Georges County.

The wedding will take place late in August.

Lockett—Carlin

Of interest to Washington is an announcement of the engagement of Miss Sallye Blanche Lockett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carlyle Lockett of Sacramento, Calif., to Charles Creighton Carlin 3d, son of Mrs. Ann Macon Carlin of Sacramento and Keith Carlin of Washington.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. Belle Ewing Berry of Sacramento, whose family were early pioneers of California. Mr. Carlin received his early education in California and attended George Washington University and the University of California. He is the grandson of the late Representative Charles C. Carlin and the late Mrs. Lillian B. Carlin of Alexandria, Va.

Arcaro—Arcaro

Mrs. Ralph Arcaro has announced the engagement of her daughter, Jennie Marie, to Joseph Vincent Arcaro, son of Mrs. Vincent Arcaro of Richmond. The families are not related.

Miss Arcaro attended Washington schools. Mr. Arcaro is a graduate of the University of Richmond and later attended Georgetown University graduate school. He is with the advertising department of The Washington Post.

The wedding will take place June 17.

Williams—Warner

Mr. and Mrs. Lester A. Williams of Milton, Mass., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Anne, to Gerald Lee Warner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Warner of Washington. Miss Williams attended Duke University and was graduated from Simmons College in Boston. Mr. Warner will be graduated from George Washington University this month. A September wedding is planned.

Paper—Binder

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Paper of Chicago and Washington announce the engagement of their daughter Marian to Benjamin Binder, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Binder of Washington. The wedding will take place September 3 in Beth Sholom Congregation.

Both Miss Paper and her fiance attended George Washington University. Mr. Binder was senior vice commander of the Jewish War Veterans.

Hayden—Powell

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Hayden of Chevy Chase, Md., announced the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Katherine, to Jerome Powell, son of Mrs. J. Eris Powell to Chevy Chase and the late Mr. Powell.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Trinity College. Mr. Powell, who holds degrees from Georgetown University and Georgetown University Law School, is an assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Golf Queens Will Model

SEVERAL of the top feminine golfers in this weekend's National Celebrities Golf Tournament will turn fashion models on Friday.

They are the Bauer sisters—Marlene and Alice—, Patty Berg and Betty Danoff. For one hour on Friday, from 12 noon to 1 p. m., these high powered gals of the links will model Weathervane "golfers," in the Sportswear Shop of Jelleff's. The dresses, made of celanese rayon, are designed by Jane Derby.

But instead of the usual stately walk along the runway, the girls will give the modeling process a special twist of their own. While wearing their classic "golfers," they will demonstrate putt and swing shots, using cotton golf balls.

Saturday and Sunday the girls may be seen in real action on the courses of the Army and Navy Country Club, where they will be competing in the fourth annual Celebrities Tournament, sponsored by The Washington Post.

Pointers for Painters: Anne Advises

A Decorator on Applying a 4-Color 'Spatterdash' to Floor of Playroom

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me directions for painting the floor in our playroom in spatterdash effect? We would like to spatter the black floor with red, yellow, and white, but are uncertain as to how to go about it. W. W. G., Arlington.

First step in starting on this job is a protective one—taping newspapers to the walls to a height of at least 2 or 3 feet above the floor to protect them from splashed paint. It's also a good idea to mix the first spatter color before you apply your last coat of base paint, as the latter should be dried only to a "gluey" consistency before you spatter it.

For spattering, use regular interior floor paint. Thin it only about half as much as for ordinary purposes and pour it into a saucer or similar container. Now brush on the final coat of base paint over an area four to five feet square and let it dry until gluey. Apply spatter colors with a coarse, stubby brush or broom. Dip spatter brush into spatter color, taking up only a moderate amount of paint. If brush is too full, the paint will fall in large gobs.

Hold a thick, round stick in one hand, and with the other hand rap the spatter brush against the stick so that the first color is aimed at the center of the square you are covering. As you work from one square to the next, you will find the margin left unspattered on one square will be covered as you do the next.

When the first square has received one spatter color, apply the base paint to the next square and spatter on the first color as above. Repeat this process, working in squares, until the entire floor has received the first spatter color. Then, when the floor has been allowed to dry, you can apply the second spatter color, or a third or fourth if you wish.

DEAR ANNE:

It seems to me that I have heard that there are substances that can be spread about and will repel mice with their odor. I live in an apartment house which certainly has its full share of mice. I am constantly trapping the little creatures but am about to go away for a month and would like to take some preventive measures to keep them out of the place while I am away.

W. W. G., Washington.

Yes, it's true that mice, having a very keen sense of smell, are repelled by various odors. They do not care for the fragrance of napthalene flakes, oil of citronella, cedarwood, wintergreen, peppermint and a nicotine sulphate compound. Do not use any of them where there is danger of food spoilage or contamination. Napthalene flakes, in particular, are useful scattered over rugs or upholstery which they might raid for nest materials. The effect of these things lessens with long exposure to air, but they should be of some help, anyway, in keeping the little fellows away.

DEAR ANNE:

Should a widow use her husband's name or her own, such as Mrs. John H. Jones, or Mrs. Mary Ann Jones? Specifically, should a card of condolence be addressed in his name or hers?

Agriculture, D. C.

A widow retains her husband's name, according to best social usage. Mrs. John H. Jones is therefore the correct address for a condolence card. As a matter of fact, "Mrs." should not be used before a woman's given name under any circumstances, strict etiquet decrees.

Adm. Byrd Mourns for Dog, Successor to Famed Igloo I

Igloo II

The little white mongrel died of accidental poisoning sometime Tuesday night, not two weeks after he had attached himself to the explorer.

The miracle when that happened was that the pooch so closely resembled Igloo I. Around the Navy building there were jokes about reincarnation.

Igloo I's adventurous life included trips with Admiral Byrd to the North and South Poles. He even had a book written about him.

Igloo II, said the Admiral yesterday, "never got out of Washington."

Igloo I lived for more than seven years, 1925 to 1932, Igloo II couldn't have been more than a year old.

Met Admiral Same Way

Another strange thing about Igloos I and II was that they introduced themselves to the admiral in the same way. They just followed him around, devotedly until the admiral agreed to informal adoption proceedings—like a pat, or a meal.

Living in a hotel, the admiral had some hesitation about keeping the dog with him.

Igloo was farmed out among the admiral's friends "but he always came back to me," Byrd said.

Commdr. F. G. Dustin's 5-year-old daughter, Katherine expressed interest in Igloo lasht week Dustin is the admiral's aide. So Igloo's most recent address was 1735 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Igloo's Unlucky Snack

Monday or so Kathy took Igloo for a walk. The dog afterward became "very sick."

Commdr. Dustin explained that Igloo, probably having led a hazardous life, was unable to shake the long-standing habit of scavenging for food. That did it.

Admiral Byrd knew that Igloo was ailing, but for a time his office kept the news of the dog's death from him.

"I knew he got awfully sick," the admiral said. "His death was a very sad thing."

Bethesda Raid Nets 3 Gaming Arrests at Grill

Montgomery County Police yesterday afternoon raided the Red Fox Grill, 7800 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, and arrested three men on horse-race betting charges.

Millard E. Peake, 65, tavern operator, and Jerome Douglas McClure, 26, bartender, both charged with "becoming a depositor of or forwarding horse-race bets," and James E. Spiller, 49, plasterer of 4927 Cordell ave., Bethesda, charged with accepting horse-race bets.

East suspect was held under $100 bond for trial in Bethesda Police Court on June 12.

Montgomery County Police also arrested Harvey V. Payne, 48, painter of 538 13th st. ne., on a charge of writing numbers bets at a Bethesda construction project.

Conference Today

Methodist Appointees To Be Named

The 169th session of the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Church will open today at Western Maryland College, Westminister.

High point of the four-day meeting will be the reading of appointments Sunday night by Bishop W. W. Peele, resident bishop of the Richmond area of the Methodist Church. He will preside at the sessions in place of Bishop W. Flint of Washington, who is out of town.

In addition to naming clergymen to all Methodist pulpits in the area, which includes Baltimore and the District of Columbia, the bishop will name two new district superintendents.

They will be named to succeed the Rev. Dr. Ralph D. Smith, superintendent of the Washington West District, and the Rev. J. T. Spicknall of the Baltimore West District, who have completed their six-year terms of office.

Conference speaker will be the Rev. Dr. E. G. Homrighausen, who will give talks today and Friday.

During the sessions, reports will be given by the conference boards of world peace, temperance, social projects, world service and finance and others.

Cancer Grant Made

The District Cancer Society yesterday announced a Runyon Fund grant of $1597 to the Carnegie Institution of Washington for cancer research during the next fiscal year.

Clerics Doubt Censure Is in Store for Dun

It is "quite improbable" that the Episcopal Bishop of Washington will be censured for inviting clergymen of other denominations to join in a communion service at Washington Cathedral, five Episcopal leaders said yesterday.

Last week the local branch of the American Church Union asked the Episcopal House of Bishops to censure and discipline the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, for the action.

The communion was at a service on "God, Man, and the Hydrogen Bomb" on February 22.

In a statement, the five area clergymen said the service has "abundant precedents," and it appeared unlikely that any censure would be offered by the House of Bishops.

The American Church Union, they continued, is an unofficial organization within the church "representing a minority point of view."

The statement was signed by Canon Theodore O. Wedel, warden of the College of Preachers and chairman of the Standing Committee of the Diocese; the Rev. Leland Stark, rector of the Church of the Epiphany and president of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship; the Rev. E. Felix Kloman, rector of St. Alban's Church Canon Charles Martin, headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys, and the Rev. J. J. Ambler, rector of Pinkney Memorial Church and dean of the Northern Convocation.

Heart Attack Fatal After 2-Car Crash

Charles S. Evans, 77, of Mitchellville, Md., died of a heart attack induced by shock and injuries suffered in a two-car collision yesterday on the Palmer Hwy. at Johnson ave., near Glenarden.

Evans died at 5:30 a. m. in Prince Georges General Hospital, nine hours after a car in which he was a passenger and which was driven by his son, Charles C. Evans, 33, 2518 17th st. nw., was in a sideswipe collision with a car driven by Leonard Williams, of Chapel Oaks, Md.

The younger Evans was not hospitalized. County Medical Examiner Maloney said the accident caused the father's heart attack.

In a two-car collision near Annapolis Tuesday night Brian Bell, Jr., 23, a sportswriter for the Washington Evening Star, suffered a concussion. Bell, a former Washington and Lee football star, who lives at 309 N. Thomas st. Arlington, was discharged from Anne Arundel General Hospital after treatment.

Bell's car collided with a car driven by Ira Aucker, 38, of Halethorpe. Bell was charged with reckless driving and failure to stop at a stop sign and Aucker with reckless driving.

Treated for injuries and released were Miss Ann Mattingly, 19, Oxon Hill, Md., bruises on the left arm; Miss Virginia Beecher, 22, of 1825 N. Hartford st., Arlington, knee injuries, and Alvin Reesser, 49, Baltimore County, face cuts. Admitted for observation was Mrs. Mattie Gates, 49, of Halethorpe, who suffered leg and back injuries. Police said Miss Mattingy and Miss Beecher were in Bell's car.

Bell, son of the late Brian Bell, former bureau chief of the Associated Press, played football at the University of Virginia and Washington and Lee University. He was signed by the Redskins last year but didn't play.

Weatherman Promises Sun For a Change

The Weather Bureau promised Washington cooler and clearer weather today.

Yesterday both the humidity and the temperature hung around the 80s. During the afternoon's showers, the humidity reached a peak of 96 percent.

If the day's temperatures had been higher "we just couldn't have taken it," a weather forecaster said. As it was the temperature's high was 81 degrees at 2 p. m., with a low of 64 and 3:30 a. m.

The Weather Bureau looked for a high of 75 today and an overnight low of 64.

Showers and scattered thunderstorms were expected last night. The four-tenths of an inch rain that fell in the afternoon caused little more damage than wrinkled suits and water-logged shoes.

Lane Defends Sales Tax in CampaignTalk

Baltimore, May 31 (AP)—Governor Lane "proudly" tied his political fortunes to his record—and the sales tax—in his first campaign speech tonight. He asked critics of the tax to say how Maryland could have managed without it.

"They are mysteriously silent on this important question," the Democratic Governor declared in a speech prepared for broadcast over several stations to announce formally his candidacy for renomination.

"I suspect they delude themselves into believing that they can fool you into believing that we can have something for nothing.

"Now is the time to ask them to put up or shut up."

Standing "just as firmly on my record as I stood on my platform four years ago," the governor in a free-swinging speech submitted himself for a second term.

He didn't want re-election, however, "if the price of being governor is to avoid constructive discussion of real issues and fill the air with a lot of promises that can't be met."

"So far as I am concerned, this isn't going to be a campaign to bamboozle the public." The governor did not mention his principal opponent, J. P. Mahoney, whom he ousted from the job of racing commissioner three years ago.

"I could have dealt half-heartedly with its crying needs," he said, and listed them:

The "pitiful condition in the mental institutions;" the "fact that our public school system was physically dilapidated, wholly inadequate for the greatly increased student population," and the "urgent need for modernizing and rebuilding a highway system that was steadily deteriorating."

Rusche Speaks

Doctors Told To Beware of Complacency

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Doctors assembled here yesterday were warned to avoid becoming so puffed up in themselves that they neglect the healing power of religion.

"Whether or not we admit it, we are always dependent on the power greater than ourselves," declared Dr. Carl Rusche, of Hollywood, Calif.

He spoke in a farewell address as the outgoing president of the American Urological Association, at its forty-fifth meeting in the Hotel Statler. Some 1400 specialists in surgery of the genito-urinary tract are attending the four-day scientific sessions which end today.

Dangers of Specialization

Describing some of the dangers of medical specialization, Dr. Rusche declared:

"In the pursuit of scientific wizardry we may have lost some of the heart and soul of our profession."

Physical characteristics and abilities may make a man a capable physician, but will not make him "a real credit to the profession," he added. Other attributes needed include sympathy, tolerance, charity, humility and religion, the speaker said.

"Let us beware of self-complacency," Dr. Rusche urged. "The doctor, by his absorption in the specific, may have a tendency to ignore the wider context of this universe.

"We should remind ourselves that the source of healing in the world . . . is basically not the creation of man.

It is made available to us by the creative power."

From the patient's viewpoint, Dr. Rusche declared, religion "helps believers endure the troubles of life, and bear the cruelties of reality."

"Let us not underestimate the intimate relationship between God and Nature," the speaker concluded.

"Beyond the creative power of God there is the redemptive power, the mercy of God and the power and hope of prayer, all of which may contribute to the healing process."

Dr. Rusche spoke at the afternoon assembly preceding election of officers and installation of Dr. Thomas D. Moore, of Memphis, as the new president.

Two Urologists Report

At earlier sessions yesterday, urologists reported success in saving lives with "artificial kidney" machines, and told of development of a way to produce unremia, the blood-poisoning of malfunctioning kidneys, in dogs, to help speed research on the deadly processes of the disease.

Dr. Walter M. Kearns of Milwaukee, described work with one type of the "artificial kidneys" at Milwaukee's Columbia Hospital. Since installation of the machine last October, he said, three of five patients "destined to die" were saved, and the other two were greatly relieved.

How Kidney Machines Work

The machines, which are tied in with the patient's blood circulation, purify the blood of urine wastes that flood the bloodstream when kidneys stop functioning. Where the kidney disorder is "reversible," Dr. Kearns explained, the machines can carry on the work long enough to prevent death, and speed the kidneys' return to normal.

Dr. Roger Baker of Chicago, Ill., told of the development of a relatively simple technique of inducing uremia in dogs, at the University of Illinois Medical School. Using the method, he said, scientists may now "turn on" uremic poisoning processes at will, for better study of conditions. Uremia is an end result of chronic nephritis, more commonly known as Bright's Disease.

Chief Gunner's Death Laid to Drunken Fall

The mysterious death of Chief Gunner's Mate Wesley C. Thompson last March 26 was due to a fall suffered during alcoholic unconsciousness, the Navy said yesterday.

Official 136-page report of a Naval Board of Investigation, dated April 20, was released yesterday on the case by the Potomac River Naval Command.

Off duty at the time of his death, he lived with his wife and two children at 4902 1st st., Temple Hills, Md.

R. K. Fairfax Is Cleared of Sex Charge

Rudolph K. Fairfax, 34, a Baltimore construction worker, was cleared yesterday of an indictment charging him with sex offenses against a 5-year-old girl.

John C. Conliff, Assistant United States Attorney, moved to dismiss the indictment, and told Judge Alexander Holtzoff that the Government lacked sufficient evidence to obtain a conviction. The judge then granted the motion.

Fairfax pleaded innocent to the charge, both in Municipal Court after he was arrested, and in District Court following the indictment.

Msgr. Jordan To Direct C. U. Church Studies

The Right Rev. Edward B. Jordan, vice rector of Catholic University, yesterday was named director of studies of the ecclesiastical schools of the university.

Fr. Jordan

The appointment, made by the university's board of trustees, was confirmed by the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities at Rome.

Monsignor Jordan succeeds the Most Rev. Francesco Lardone, Apostolic Nunsio to Haiti and Dominican Republic, who served as director of ecclesiastical studies before his elevation a year ago.

Monsignor Jordan, who also will continue in his post as vice rector, has been a teacher and officer of the university since 1921. He was dean of the Catholic Sisters College, professor of education at Trinity College and head of the university's department of education before he was named vice rector in 1945.

55 Drivers For District Win Awards

Fifty-five District employes were given safe driving awards at a District Building ceremony yesterday for driving on the job 10 to 13 years without a "preventable" accident.

Francis L. Timmons, jr., chief clerk of the Engineer Department, said 469 other employes will be given similar pins and certificates by department heads for safe dirving records ranging up to nine years.

The awards are made by the National Safety Council for "defensive driving," which it defines as not merely observing traffic regualtions, but also keeping constantly alert so as to "take the necessary preventive action before dangerous situations do cause accidents."

Awards were given as follows:

Thirteen-year awards: Division of Sanitation—Willie Adams, H. E. Arney, Neleigh Bethune, Willie B. Chatman, Melvin Ortizes, E. L. Luzenbel; Sewer Division—Warren Catterton, Samuel Carter, George Green, William B. Hegris, Louis Kardaras, Edward Schauerman; Department of Highways—Clarence Bowie, Earl Hardy, L. DP Conferees Agree on Bill Raising Quotas

Senate-House conferees who have been tusseling for weeks over displaced persons legislation reached final agreement yesterday on a compromise bill boosting the quota total to 340,000.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), a member of the conference committee, said the measure will be reported out today for further action by the Senate and House which earlier had approved varying bills.

Under the compromise provisions the DP act would be extended another year beyond the June 30 expiration date and the total of those ruled eligible for admission to this country would be raised from 205,000 to 340,000. This includes the 150,000 homeless Europeans who already have been granted haven here.

The original House bill which was approved last year called for the admission of 339,000 refugees, while the Senate measure adopted in April provided for a total of 359,000.

The major change worked out by the conference group concerned the admission of the so-called German expellees—people of German origin who were ordered out of such countries as Czecho-Slovakia and Romania under the Potsdam Agreement.

Ferguson said the compromise bill provides for the entry of 54,000 of the German expellees under regular immigration rules, with 10,000 of them charged against the German-Austrian quotas. The remainder are to be charged against the quotas of the countries of origin.

The conference group also altered the provisions for admission of 10,000 orphans to permit the entry of 5000 up to the age of 12 and 5000 up to the age of 16. Under the original DP Act the age limit was set at 16 years for the full 10,000.

STENOGRAPHER
ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

Why take a boring job in a dull office, when here's a chance to work in a fast-moving, hard-hitting advertising sales department with something new going on all the time? If you like a placid life, this is not for you. But if you're a fast and accurate stenographer and proud of it, if you like a job that tests your capabilities and keeps you active mentally, phone NAtional 4200, extension 311, and ask for an interview appointment. Experience not as important as speed and drive.

Underworld Insiders say that indicted gambler Frank Erickson "will take a bath" (get a cleaning) over the bookie scandals. Because he hasn't the fortune everybody thinks he has . . . The N. Y. Dis't Att'y doesn't want Costello or Adonis (but Mr. Whiskers is still trying) because they have been smarter . . . None of the three Big Boys is in a jam with Internal Revenue because that is one thing they learned from Capone's fate. Their income tax returns are said to be purer than many respected citizens.

T. S. Eliot's "Cocktail Party" is rewarding the St. Louis-born author (who gave up his citizenship to be a Britisher) $3000 weekly . . . Sir Walter Raleigh's original pipe at Dunhill's is valued at $10,000. It is so precious they keep it locked in a safe with an armed guard . . . The Johnston Office killed most of them last time because they revealed too much Marie . . . Show Business: Vic Damone waited and waited for the breaks. Now that they are here he has to chuck $100,000 in offered bookings because MGM picked up his option for his first flicker. Loses money on the deal . . . Critic G. J. Nathan's scoop: That John Gunther, the bookwriter, dislikes "South Pacific." Well, "South Pacific" doesn't like him, either!

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" has recouped its $200,000 production cost plus a surplus of $50,000 in bonds and cash. This fiscal feat was accomplished in 23 weeks—uncommonly rapid procedure on the part of a major Broadway musical . . . "Blondes" runs up a weekly profit of $12,500. Now that production cost has been expunged, the producers can divide $6250 weekly. This is a great relief to H. Levin of that team, because when the show opened in Philly last November 17 he had cash assets of $15 . . . The hit probably will linger another year, enrich all investors and curdle the spine of the many who spurned the importunities of producers Levin & Smith last summer, when they were searching under abandoned piers and Westchester culverts for prospective partners.

Broadway Arithmetic is Like This: "Arms and the Girl" cost $200,000 to stage. It came to The Big Apple with an advance sale of $450,000. It just closed—the loss being $145,000 . . . Betty Ann Grove, who takes over Lisa Kirk's featured role in "Kiss Me Kate," the hit, never appeared in a Broadway show. What a break . . . Doreen Oswald of that click will be the tenth in the cast to wed soon . . . Artie Shaw's busted up his band again . . . The shows are dying in bunches. Three last week—four next . . . G. Kanin's new play, "For Men Only," will be retagged "The Live Wire" . . . Talu Bankhead's sideshow: Broke through the crowd at the Empire stage entrance to scold Julie Harris: "You naughty girl. You've made my makeup run!" Then she kissed the newcomer show-stopper on each cheek and fled . . . David Wayne, who deserted "Mr. Roberts" for Girltown, will have only 5 lines of dialog in "M." And he's the star!

"The Mint," written by Lawrence of Arabia in 192, is as impossible to buy as an atom bomb. It is just about as explosive, too. Before Lawrence died he ordered that it not be published before 1950 . . . To protect the copyright, publishers Doubleday printed 7 copies in 1935 . . . Two uncut pages are in The Library of Congress. But readers cannot make notes . . . Doubleday put the other 5 copies in a locked vault—after offering them for sale at the prohibitive fee of $500,000 per copy . . . Here's the Pay-Off: There'll be NO publication this year or for a long time to come. Because "The Mint" makes "Ulysses" look like a girl scout manual and names (in an unnice way) many prominent Britishers.

If you want to hear ragtime played in jazzmatazz style, then spin Eduardo Condon's platter of "Dill Pickles." But if you are doing a column and they are playing the oldie torchant, "I Still Get A Thrill Thinking of You," you let it wait . . . "The Liar" laid an $180,000 omelette . . . Road companies usually squander big coin on billboards. But not "S. Pac." It takes a 2X4 advert in the local gazette a week before it arrives and presto! Sellout . . . The top copy is still Movietown. Even the Vatican's newspaper has a Hollywood Correspondent . . . Witness Spencer Tracy's superformance in "Father of the Bride" and you'll understand why he has remained a top-flight star for more than 25 years. His secret is Talent.

Faith Is Power

'I Shall Live As Long as I Want To!'

This is the fourth of a series of six installments condensed from the current popular book, "Faith Is Power—For You" by Dr. Daniel A. Poling. Today's chapter makes it clear that God is 'Not a God of Special Interests.'

By Daniel A. Poling

CHAPTER FOUR

"I Shall Live as Long as I want To—But"——

I shall fly, or drive, or sail in ships, or ride on trains as time requires and schedules make necessary to finish the work undone. For always I shall know that God keeps my time if I keep myself in the line of duty and that I shall live as long as I want to!

But some have lived longer than that and here enters the mystery, here is one of the questions we must "hang up" until there is time enough to find their answers.

Have there been times when I believed, when I knew that God was stepping in to keep me in time and space?

Yes. But does that not show God to be a God of "special interests," granting favors to some that are withheld from others?

No—the prayer I pray may be your prayer too, and that of every other person. Every good I know is for each and all. This is the story of my faith, but it is a formula that may be yours.

Also others who died when I survived may well have reached the time that I shall reach, the time when the life task—however humble—is finished, and when that which is better may be claimed.

On some flight or journey or in some quiet place my work shall be finished and then no prayer of mine would grant me an extension of time—nor would I pray that prayer!

Letter From Young Mother

A few months ago a letter from a young mother in Virginia who was dying with an incurable disease moved me. She wanted life because of her small children, her husband; her home.

Not selfishly did she pray; rather she felt herself to be selfish because her thought of dying was for herself radiant with happiness. However, she had come to believe that prayer could and would heal her.

It has. At any rate, given up by her doctors and her case pronounced hopeless, she is out of bed and carrying the full burden of her motherhood.

You may remember the words of the distinguished physicist Alexis Carrel: "Those occasions . . . when prayer has overcome the so-called laws of nature, the occasions when prayer has dramatically done this have been termed miracles."

The day after Dr. Carrel retired from his relationships with the Rockefeller Institute I sat with him and with another friend who is a practicing physician in New York City. During the luncheon conversation Dr. Carrel said that twice he had seen cancer "crystallize and disappear" when the result could be traced only to prayer.

'I Am Not Going to Die'

More than forty years ago William Wright, a young man of Salem, Ohio, only recently married, went to Crile's Clinic in Cleveland. An exploratory operation revealed a malignancy that could not be removed. The opening was closed and my friend came home to die.

But he said, "I am not going to die," and he seemed to know. He convinced his wife, his friends, his immediate community.

These forty years in which William Wright has fathered children, rejoiced in his grandchildren, achieved success in business, and rendered a constant service to his community and through his church to the world prove that William Wright is immortal until his work is done.

And in my life, too, there have been a few "coincidences"—or something more.

The trip into the remote Siletz Basin of Oregon when, with no medical aid to be had, I all but died with "inflammation of the bowels," which was no doubt acute appendicitis with a ruptured appendix. There was the field in France where twice under a close-up barrage in World War II was uninjured. And a bank of the Upper Rhine in World War II when, under direct fire of a "pill box" not a hundred yards away, I was unhurt.

All that I could do was pray that prayer for others as for myself. Pray in terror, yes, but believing.

"Stories More Startling"

Twice I have missed planes that went on to fatal landings, and once an elevator crashed in Columbus with fatal results—an elevator whose door was open as it waited for me when I was called to my office.

But you say, "Others—millions of them—have stories and coincidences even more startling." Again the answer is, "Yes—certainly."

And here let it be written that there is a temptation to be resisted, an evil to be avoided, in acknowledging the amazing grace that God the Infinite releases to you and to me who are finite.

That evil is pride and the temptation is the temptation to fall into the mood of the Pharisee's thanksgiving. You will remember that he thanked God that he was not as other men, even as the publican who knelt in humility, crying out his unworthiness.

This story of my faith, my experience in prayer—prayer that through the years of my life, in the daily affairs with which I have been charged, has given me peace with power. It must be, and is equally, a confession of weakness and failure, of too little done and too many mistakes made when the resources available are limitless.

The very title selected for this book by its publishers—"Faith is Power for You"—is presumptuous and can be justified only if what I have written helps those who read to find what I have found, but to use it better.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Have a Prophecy

What's Television Going to Do to Us?

By John Crosby

RESEARCH on what television will or will not do to us is roughly the Nation's second largest industry now. I have no great faith in surveys, as such, but I have a pronounced weakness for them as fiction. I have assembled quite a collection of recent prophecies concerning television which I'd like to pass along.

The National Beer Wholesalers Association at its recent convention was told that television is shifting beer-drinking habits from the saloon to the home. Saloon sales of beer are way down this year in areas where there is television; package and grocery store sales are way up. Meanwhile, in Chicago another research outfit discovered that low income groups stay out of saloons a lot more since they bought the set than before they owned it. In fact, a lot of this low income crowd buys the set with that in mind—to get papa out of the saloon and safely home. It doesn't work with the high income—$10,000 a year—crowd. Nothing will get that bunch out of the saloons.

This may be heartening news to the temperance people but, just to prevent them from getting too overjoyed about it, I'd like to remind them of Fred Allen's crack: "Television is driving people out of their homes and into the saloons to look at it. Eventually, it will drive them out of their homes and into the saloons to get away from it."

Says It's Good for Them

SOONER or later some psychiatrist was going to come out in contradiction to all the educators who have expressed alarm at the effect of television on the young and insist that TV was good for the young. Well, a psychiatrist has. He is Dr. Bruce Robinson, head psychiatrist of schools in Newark, N. J., and he has taken about as contrary a point of view as it is possible to take, even for a psychiatrist. Dr. Robinson says television is more beneficial to children than homework. He goes beyond that. He says that if homework interferes with television, the teachers should abolish the homework so that junior can gaze at Ed Sullivan without interruption.

I don't know how Dr. Robinson arrived at such a conclusion. I do know that it is silly to disagree with psychiatrists, who can engulf the layman in baffling arguments in a matter of seconds. Still, flying in the face of common sense, I should like to express a mild dissent. The discipline of the mind of the young still, I think, can be handled more capably by Shakespeare than by Sullivan. All right, I'm old-fashioned, but that's the way I feel, Dr. Robinson.

Effect on Sports

THE other survey I have at hand concerns TV's effects on sports attendance, probably the hottest controversy of all. Jerry N. Jordon recently disclosed in Milwaukee the results of a two-year survey in which 16 major and 444 minor league ball clubs, 198 colleges, 32 high schools and more than 100 race tracks, arenas and other sports enterprises cooperated. The results are pretty surprising. According to Jordon, people who own TV sets for a couple of years actually attend more sports events than people who don't own sets.

In Philadelphia, for example, people who had owned sets for a year or more attended ball games at Shibe Park an average of 5.9 games; the non-owners, only 4.4 The same applies to football. Fifty-four percent of TV owners of two years or more attend football games, as opposed to only 46 percent of nonowners. Sports attendance does fall off while the set is new, but increases when the novelty departs. This would indicate that television is having the same effect as radio, which introduced baseball to millions of people, especially women, who had never paid much attention to it before.

The argument that TV would drive the minor league to extinction because sports fans would rather watch a major league game on television than a minor league game at the ballpark has not been borne out either, says Jordon.

Indonesia Gets Roper Estate For Embassy

Sale of the Roper Estate to the Republic of Indonesia for approximately $150,000 was announced yesterday by J. Francis Harris 3d.

Harris is vice president of the Rodenberg Realty Corporation which, he said, recently completed negotiations for the eight-acre, 19-room estate at 2700 Tilden st. nw. He said the newly formed republic will establish its embassy there. The Indonesian chancery is located at 2523 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The estate is owned by the children of the late Daniel C. Roper, who was Secretary of Commerce from 1932 to 1938.

Executors of the property are the late cabinet officer's two oldest children, James Hunter Roper of Los Angeles and Mrs. David R. Coker of Hartsville S. C.

The estate has been unoccupied since the war when it was leased for a brief period to the Russian Military attache.

Sidener Back on Job; $50,000 Fine Lifted

Canton, Ill., May 31 (U.P.).—Lloyd Sidener, who was laid off his coal mine job, fined $50,000 and ousted as president of a United Mine Workers local when he tried to lead men back to work during last winter's coal strike, went back to work today.

It was the end of a 12-week forced layoff for Sidener. The fine and ousting were rescinded last week.

Dorothy Dix Improved

New Orleans, May 31 (AP).—Columnist Dorothy Dix, hospitalized several weeks for a diabetic condition, is almost fully recovered, her physician said today.

Let's Hope They Don't Make Him Homesick

Washington's stifling summers will be a bit more bearable from now on for Icelandic Minister Thor Thors. Salesman Albert Bass of 1335 Rittenhouse st. nw. has just sold Minister Thors two air-conditioning units.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

"Why," wonders Andy F. Kisacky of 4806 Suitland rd. se., "do they call them 'greenhouses' when they're always painted white?"

MY WORD, MARK!

We will now call the roll of eagle-eyed readers of the comic strips.

First to check in were R. A. Payne of 2884 S. Buchanan st., Fairlington, Va., and Sherill Lemley of 2606 S. Adams st., Arlington, Va. They both work for the Chicago & Northwestern Railway here.

Next were Tom Sauter of 7901 Chelton rd., Bethesda, Md.; Frances Malon of 1916 G st. nw.; Seymour Dubroff of 2962 2d st. se.; John F. Curtin of 143 Kentucky ave. se.; "A Retired Post Printer"; and Edward McIntosh of 9411 Seminole st., Silver Spring, Md.

They're the alert readers who protested that in a recent series of Mark Trail strips, the villain was handcuffed, then he tied up Mark, and then he had the handcuffs on again. Unfortunately, the scene in which Mark was tied up clearly showed the villain with his two hands a yard apart. And of course the more critical of our readers want to know how a man can do this while he's handcuffed.

Frankly, I don't know. But I have a theory. Maybe the villain will turn out to be a pupil of the late Harry Houdini. Or maybe we'll just sentence Cartoonist Ed Dodd to stand in the corner until he gives us a better explanation.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Why is there such a discrepancy in time on the various local radio stations? There will be as much as three minutes difference between the end of a program on one station and the start of the next program on another station.

Margaret C. C. Lemont,
10 E. Woodbine St.,
Chevy Chase, Md.

Dear Mrs. Lemont:

Several factors account for the difference.

Network stations almost invariably start programs "straight up" on the hour, half-hour, or quarter-hour.

They also make a great effort to end programs exactly on time. But regardless of when the previous program ends, the new one starts "straight up," meaning, for example, at no minutes and no seconds past the appointed time.

However, in recent years we've seen the advent of "hitchhikers" (another commercial after the "closing" commercial on a sponsored program) and "double-spotting" (two consecutive commercials, back to back, bought by different sponsors). Sometimes, there's also a short "station-break" commercial, or time-signal commercial.

Each runs for a given number of seconds. A station or network using two or three such commercials in a row must end its programs a corresponding number of seconds early, in order to be able to start the new program "straight up."

On non-network stations, a recorded musical selection does not always finish when it's supposed to—either because of lack of planning or bad planning. Some stations hack 'em short, to make them fit; others permit the music to run to its conclusion. They don't have to "pick up the network" at a given moment, so timing isn't a matter of life and death with them, and each broadcaster can determine his own policy regarding starting and finishing times.

Therefore tuning from a network to a non-network station (or vice versa) is apt to be confusing.

In any event, when the man says it's 10 o'clock, or whatever time he announces, it really isn't. It will be that time when the next program starts—and on WTOP you can get it to the second on network shows because they're usually preceded by a short "beep." Bill.

AIN'T POP A PIP?

Poet Pop Grey notes that a holdup story the other day contained the victimized woman's statement: "The robber was the handsomest man I've ever seen."

Pop is highly indignant, and thinks The Washington Post owes him an apology. "It's a lie," he howls. "I have witnesses to prove I wasn't even in town that day."

Why Amerasia Case Was Dropped

By Drew Pearson

Jim McInerney, the Assistant Attorney General, was testifying in secret before the Tydings Committee regarding the stolen documents in the Amerasia case.

McInerney

McInerney now in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division, handled the Amerasia prosecution when he had a lower position in the Justice Department five years ago. And the man who cross-examined him, Senate Committee Counsel Ed Morgan, once worked in the FBI as a top expert on Communists. They knew each other well.

"Jim," asked Morgan, "did anyone ever bring any pressure on you regarding these people who were indicted in the Amerasia case?"

"Yes," replied McInerney.

Republican Senators pricked up their ears. This was just what they had been looking for. The Scripps-Howard Newspaper chain, now sued for libel by one of the Amerasia former defendants, has been claiming that political pressure caused the Justice Department to drop the case.

"Where did the pressure come from?" continued Morgan.

"The White House," replied McInerney.

Republican Senators were all smiles. Democratic Senators looked worried.

"Who in the White House?" pressed Morgan.

"The President," said the tight-lipped McInerney, apparently not willing to volunteer anything unless asked.

"What did the President say?" asked Morgan. By this time both Democratic and Republican Senators were almost holding their breath.

"The President called me on the phone," said McInerney, "and said, 'don't let anything stop you from sending those B——s to jail.'"

The Senators relaxed. The Republicans looked disappointed. But they knew if for no other reason than because they were familiar with the President's mule-driver language, that McInerney was telling the truth.

Why Case Was Dropped

The real story of why McInerney could not carry out the President's orders is now fairly well understood—namely, because OSS and FBI men searched the Amerasia office and Emmanuel Larsen's apartment without a warrant, thereby violating the fourth amendment.

However, the slow-speaking McInerney, a Catholic, conscientious, and with the map of Ireland written all over his face, gave a graphic account during his first closed-door session with the Senators. He told, among other things, how he had persuaded Judge James Proctor to hold special court on Saturday, September 29, 1945, in order to handle the Amerasia case.

At first Judge Proctor had demurred at holding court on Saturday, but the reason for the special session, McInerney explained to Senators, was because one defendant, Larsen, had discovered the FBI illegally entered his apartment, had filed a motion to dismiss, and McInerney feared other defendants would get wise and also move to dismiss.

Therefore, he had to act fast.

The chief defendant, Philip Jaffe, had hinted that he might plead "guilty." So McInerney immediately got hold of his attorney and put across an agreement that the Justice Department would accept a fine if Jaffe would plead guilty. McInerney said he knew that if Jaffe's lawyer and Larsen's lawyer had a chance to confer and Jaffe learned about the illegal search, the Government would not be able to convict anyone.

Therefore he phoned the District of Columbia Clerk of the Court and asked him to withhold from the press Larsen's motion to dismiss, for fear Jaffe would hear about it. This was on Friday.

The clerk replied that once a court paper is filed, it becomes a public record, and that three newsmen were demanding the Larsen motion already.

McInerney told the Senators that instead of deserving criticism he thought the Justice Department had done pretty well to get even two defendants fined, instead of having the entire case blow up in its face.

Newspaper Chain Tactics

One interesting fact about the Amerasia case is that the illegal search by the OSS and FBI has been well known to the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain for some time. However, when the American Society of Newspaper Editors met here April 28, Roy Howard, head of the chain, instructed his editors to stage a steady campaign on the Amerasia case and for Senator McCarthy.

Since then, regardless of the feelings of individual editors, the Scripps-Howard papers have published a regular diet of one feature story a day plus several editorials a week—meanwhile withholding from the public the fact that the case could not possibly have stood up in court.

Significantly, when the Senate Lobbying Committee, under then Senator Hugo Black of Alabama, seized Hearst newspaper files in the early days of the Roosevelt Administration, the same Scripps-Howard newspapers were among the loudest to condemn that seizure—even though Senate agents were armed with subpenas. It was the view of Scripps-Howard editors at that time that the newspapers of the United States had a great deal to lose if their files, correspondence, and morgues could be examined or seized by Government agents even when they carried subpoenas and the seizure was done publicly.

Illegal search and seizure was so ruthlessly practiced by the British in Revolutionary days that it was banned by the founding fathers in the fourth amendment to the Constitution. But if it ever comes back to the United States, some editors fear that certain occupants of the White House would like nothing better than raiding newspapers.

After all, for 17 long years, the White House has had no reason to love most of the Nation's editors and publishers.

THE SOFT SHELL crab season is here, and both Thompson's and Javins' seafood stands have yours waiting for you.

The soft shells haven't been too plentiful, but they're arriving in larger quantities this week.

Thompson's also has a plentiful supply of hard-shelled crabs this week. You can buy them alive, from a big barrel, or you can buy them cooked. Thompson's cooks the crabs every other day. A crabmeat salad, nesting in a big avacado, is a delightful hot-weather luncheon dish. Both local and Louisiana crabmeat is plentiful this week.

THIS IS JUST about the last week for shad, so better enjoy it today or tomorrow. Last week for boned shad, too, unless something unexpected happens. Maybe a few days more, but not too much longer, as the season is about over.

Croakers, known locally as "hardheads" are beginning to run now, and trout and butterfish are beginning to come in from the Jersey coasts.

IT'S BARBECUE and picnic time again, so let us tell you about Johnson & Lancaster's wonderful relishes. They have a green India relish, and a red and green mixed relish that's wonderful for hot dogs, barbecues, and all kinds of sandwiches. Hint: Add a bit of this relish to deviled eggs for added flavor. You'll find rows and rows of jars of pickles and relishes, and right out where you may choose whichever one you want.

IF YOU are really lazy after the holidays, and don't want to go to the effort of making your own salads, sample those at George's Delicatessen. George has delicious potato salad, slaw, and a most impressive array of cheeses and meats. This is also a good place to remember when planning a picnic.

LET US remind you again of the wonderful tub butter you'll find at Francis Lamb's stand—just as you come in the Market. For those of you who are tired of the packaged butter, the tub butter of Mr. Lamb is a welcome respite. It's famous all over Washington, and we thought you'd like to know about it. The New York sharp cheese at this stand is also famous.
